21 KILLED IN SLEEP AS LIMITED RAMS THE WOLVERINE

Southwestern Demolishes Rear Coaches of Waiting Train Near Batavia, N. Y.

STEEL CARS TELESCOPED

All Passengers in Last One Meet Death or Injury in Mass of Tangled Metal.

OFFICIALS BLAME ENGINEER

Say Plain Danger Signals Were Set but He Denies It—Both Trains from Here.

Special to The New York Times.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Twenty-one sleeping passengers were crushed to death when the New York Central's Southwestern Limited crashed into the rear Pullmans of the Wolverine Limited at South Byron, six miles east of Batavia, at 3:36 o'clock this morning. Several were injured, three of them seriously.

The cause of the wreck is unexplained. Railroad officials declare that the signals were set against Train No. 11, the Southwestern, and that in addition a flagman had gone back with a lighted fuse to halt the onrushing train. John Friedley of Buffalo, engineer on the Southwestern, declares that the signals were clear, and that the first he saw of the flagman's warning light was when he was but a few car lengths from the Wolverine. The railroad promises a searching investigation to fix the blame for the tragedy. In addition, Coroner Sn ow of Genesee County will hold an inquest, which may place the responsibility.

The known dead and injured are:

CUMMING, THOMAS B., New York.
DOUGHERTY, PATRICK, New York.
HARVEY, S. D., residence unknown, identified by service ring signifying service with United States Army on Mexican border, inscribed on inside: "S. D. Harvey, Sergeant, Co. F., 32d Michigan Infantry."
JONES, BALLARD, New York; Pullman porter on sleeper which was demolished.
LEONARD, FRANKLIN E., believed to live in Bear Lake, Mich. Identified by tag with inscription "A. E. F., 1917. F. and A. M Lodge No. 410."
LEVENE, JENNIE Mrs., New York.
RIGBY, GEORGE, New York.
STAUD, JIMINEZ F., New York. Identification not positive.

Seriously Injured.

LICHTERMAN, NATHAN, Chicago.
LICHTERMAN, Mrs. NATHAN, Chicago.

Slightly Injured.

PETERSON, FRANK, Herkimer, N. Y., a mail clerk on Southwestern Limited.
RIGDEN, W. F., Ashtabula, Ohio, mail clerk on Southwestern Limited, left hip.
RUTAN, F. C., Chicago, back.
SIMONS, S. L., Kansas City, Mo., ankle.
TAYLOR, Mrs. O., Chicago. She was accompanied by her husband, Major Taylor.
THORNTON, E. S., Muskegon, Mich., burned on chest.

The rear sleeping car of the Wolverine was the death coach. Only three passengers in this car escaped instant death and these three are so seriously injured that their lives are despaired of. The engine of the Southwestern crashed into this coach at terrific speed. Engineer Friendly had applied the emergency brakes and their action, he declared, cut the engine and tender from the long string of coaches. Freed of this great load, the Southwestern's engine seemed almost to leap through the air, and it smashed into the Pullman coach with terrific impact.

Steel Car Ground Into Debris.

The second coach from the end of the Wolverine was buckled up by the collision so that it stood almost on end, its rear vestibule in the air. It hung thus for a moment and then crashed down and through the last coach, shearing the steel roof as if it were pasteboard. Squeezed between the onrushing engine and the second coach the last Pullman was ground into a mass of débris and those in the berths had no chance of escape.

The second car was little damaged, and those in it escaped serious injury. Rallied by an army nurse, who was a passenger, the terrified passengers made their way through broken windows and down ladders to the ground several feet below. Neither the engineer nor Fireman Brill of the Southwestern was injured in the collision, although their engine plowed through the wrecked coach.

Most of the bodies were mangled beyond any possibility of recognition. The passengers all were in night clothing and their belongings had been scattered in the mass of débris so as to be worthless as a means of identification.

The crews of the two trains and all of the available railroad workmen from Batavia worked for several hours in an effort to get out the bodies, but it was not until nearly noon, when a wrecking train arrived, that it was possible to lift away the uppermost car and begin taking the bodies out.

Eight Bodies Identified.

Eight bodies had been identified tonight. On the finger of one young man was found a Masonic signet ring, showing that he was a member of the Grand Rapids Lodge No. 410, F. and A. M., and that his name was Franklin E. Leonard, Jr.; that he was a soldier was

NO WITNESS SAW LEBAUDY KILLED

FOLLOWED MANY ATTACKS

Forced to Hide in a Maze of Rooms from Millionaire Who Was Also a Miser.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, L. I., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Marie Augustine Lebaudy, who shot and killed her husband, the eccentric Jacques Lebaudy, at their home, "The Lodge," here last night, will defend herself on the ground that she acted in self-defense and in defense of their thirteen-year-old daughter Jacqueline.

While there were apparently no witnesses to the scene immediately before the shooting and counsel for Mrs. Lebaudy have so far declined to outline her defense in detail, it will be alleged that Lebaudy intended to kill his wife and daughter. According to one theory, Lebaudy, who had gone to her home with a supply of kerosene and charcoal, was preparing to burn down the home when he was interrupted by his wife.

Mrs. Lebaudy asserted that her husband, the one-time "Emperor of Sahara," had attacked her several times recently, on one occasion nearly strangling her to death and at another time stabbing at her with a knife. H. W. Moore, her lawyer, said that within less than a week of the shooting he had made arrangements for an immediate response by the State Constabulary at Mineola in case Mrs. Lebaudy called for help.

Mrs. Lebaudy was in bed under guard today, but it was said in her behalf that she had protected her life within the last few weeks only by an ingenious system of concealments and barricades within "The Lodge," which contains about fifty rooms. Lebaudy, it was said, had ranged about the corridors of the huge structure, with a knife in his hand, while his wife and their daughter fled from one room to another and always managed to keep a locked door or two between them, until Lebaudy abandoned his designs.

No One Saw Shots Fired.

According to District Attorney Charles A. Weeks and Mr. Moore, Lebaudy and his wife were alone when the shots were fired and no one else witnessed it. The daughter was on the second floor at the time. The three servants at the house were French, who speak little English. District Attorney Weeks said that when he talked to them on indifferent topics they could make themselves understood easily in English, but that they could find no English words to make their answers with when he asked them about the events leading up to the killing and about the previous difficulties of Lebaudy and his wife. District Attorney Weeks said that he would question them tomorrow through French interpreters.

When the house and grounds were examined today charcoal was found on the floors, furniture was overturned, and sofa cushions and other articles had been thrown out of the windows. As nearly as could be made out from the French servants, these were the indications of the fury of Lebaudy over something before his wife left her sickbed to come down and shoot him. It became known that, in addition to the oranges, condensed milk, and other supplies found in Lebaudy's suitcase, he had brought several bags of charcoal in his automobile. According to persons who have known Lebaudy closely, it was not unusual for him to carry about articles of this kind, because, in spite of his wealth, he was a shrewd bargainer where household articles were concerned, and often effected small economies by delivering goods of this description whose low price had attracted him.

Mr. Moore refused to say today what appeared to be the cause of Lebaudy's violence when he first came home shortly before he was shot and killed. When asked if Mrs. Lebaudy had said that she had been attacked by her husband and had killed him in self-defense, he said:

"I don't want to go into the defense just yet. I may make a statement covering all points later, but I have not decided. As far as I have been able to learn, there were no eye-witnesses to the killing."

Could Not Stand It Longer.

District Attorney Weeks questioned Mrs. Lebaudy briefly. She was suffering from bronchitis, and had been confined to her bed for several days. According to Mr. Weeks she said:

"Yes, I shot him. He was threatening my life for fifteen years, and I couldn't stand it any longer."

District Attorney Weeks said that he would not decide what course to pursue

BALK SOVIET PLOT IN SOUTH AMERICA; ARREST LEADERS

Reds from Russia Planned to Overthrow Governments of Uruguay and Argentina.

DISCOVERED AT MONTEVIDEO

BATTLES AT BUENOS AIRES

Armed Bands Fight Troops, Despite Settlement of Strikes—Food Situation More Critical.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 12, (Associated Press.)—The police have uncovered a plot on the part of Russians to instigate a Bolshevist movement here and in Buenos Aires. Four of the leaders in the movement are said to have confessed their participation in a plan to overthrow the Uruguayan and Argentine Governments and institute Soviets in both countries. The police, by quick work, prevented an outbreak here which had been arranged to occur simultaneously with that in Buenos Aires.

The director of the "Cultural Centre" is Isaac Molinoff, a Russian, who is said by the Buenos Aires police authorities to have been an accessory in a bomb-throwing plot in the Colon Opera House several years ago. Since that time Molinoff has lived here. He was arrested during the general strike last August, charged with carrying explosives. He pleaded he was taking the bomb to sea to destroy it. He received a short sentence and recently was released from custody. It is said that Molinoff since his release has been engaged in Bolshevist propaganda.

Among those arrested with Molinoff are Moses Federmann, Numan Patulyoski, and Marcos Mirnovich. Federmann, when questioned by the police, is reported to have said that an anarchist revolution could not be long delayed in Uruguay, and that he would establish a Soviet Government along the lines of Nikolai Lenine. He is alleged to have said that he did not believe the arrest of the ringleaders in the present movement would hinder the ultimate success of the plan.

Patulyoski told the police that he had come to Montevideo from propaganda work in Buenos Aires, in order to aid in the local movement. He said he knew Molinoff in Russia, where Molinoff had been active in propaganda work.

The police have the names of and are searching for forty-two additional members of the "Centro Cultura." Already they have arrested two Poles who were endeavoring to agitate among packing house employes.

The newspapers here are heartily applauding the efficiency of the police, who thus far have prevented a repetition of the Buenos Aires disorders.

At the headquarters of Molinoff the police seized a large quantity of pamphlets printed in the Russian language.

More Fighting in Buenos Aires.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 12, (Associated Press.)—Although the iron workers' strike was settled yesterday and the general strike which had been declared by the Regional Federation was called off last night, there was only a slight decrease in the acts of anarchy during last night and today. The federation, which is known as an Anarchist organization, issued a statement today disclaiming any connection with the lawlessness, which it was asserted was due to foreign agitators.

Throughout last night and today there was shooting in various parts of the city, and cavalry patrols clashed with armed groups of men. Probably the most serious fighting occurred at daybreak at the penitentiary, the city water works, and several police stations.

The 5th and 12th Cavalry arrived in Buenos Aires today, and there also came into the city 300 marines and a regiment of mountain artillery, the latter being mounted.

Rioters early this morning set fire to the Central Market, in which several million pounds of River Plate wool were stored. The market, which is the largest wool market in the world, had been closed since the withdrawal of the American Wool Commission and lack of buying. This afternoon a mob set fire to a large print paper warehouse.

Civilians Enroll for Defense.

General Dellepaine, who assumed the Military Dictatorship last Friday, said today that the settlement of the strike had improved the situation, but that the troops would continue their activities in view of the anarchistic outbreaks, which were being led by foreigners. Simultaneously with the announcement of General Dellepaine thousands of civilians reported to the police stations to enroll for the common defense. Many persons offered their automobiles and horses, and even their homes, in the general movement to assist the army in suppressing the disorders.

In many instances the residents of entire neighborhoods enlisted as a whole and were armed at the police stations, where they remained in reserve for possible calls to duty. Hundreds of students who are not required to attend their classes also are being held in readiness for emergency, and today were be-

Luxemburg Now a Republic; Girl Ruler Quits Capital

METZ, Jan. 11, (Associated Press.)—Luxemburg was proclaimed a republic on Friday, when the Grand Duchess Marie retired from the capital, taking up quarters in a château near by.

The Chamber held an excited meeting, the Clericals quitting the house in a body.

Appointment of the Committee of Public Safety in Luxemburg was reported on Friday, when a large crowd paraded before the Grand Duchess's palace and requested her abdication. She is 24 years old, and has ruled since June, 1912.

GREGORY TO QUIT CABINET IN MARCH

Attorney General Resigns, Giving Pecuniary Responsibilities as the Reason.

TO RETURN TO LAW PRACTICE

Fifth Change in President's Official Family Since He Entered the White House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The fifth change in President Wilson's Cabinet, and the second resignation from his official family since the signing of the armistice, was announced tonight when the White House made public correspondence between President Wilson and Attorney-General Gregory showing that the latter would quit the Department of Justice on March 4, after a little more than four years of service as Attorney General.

Like Mr. McAdoo, who resigned as Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Gregory, who has been attached to the Department of Justice for nearly six years, first as special assistant to the Attorney General and later as Attorney General, pleads pecuniary responsibilities as the reasons for leaving the Cabinet. It is understood that, like Mr. McAdoo, Mr. Gregory intends to enter upon the practice of law. There is no intimation as to the possible successor of Mr. Gregory, and it is not believed that one has yet been chosen.

Mr. Gregory's letter was dated Jan. 8 and the President's reply was cabled from Paris the next day.

Mr. Gregory's letter follows:

Dear Mr. President: In accordance with the purpose expressed in our conversation just before you went abroad, I tender my resignation as Attorney General.

It has been not quite six years since I became connected with your Administration, and more than four years ago, a few days after war was declared by the European nations, I became a member of the Cabinet. It can be fairly said that during no other six years in the history of our country have so many great problems been presented and solved. The reflection that at such a time I have been permitted to stand by your side and assist in a modest way in dealing with those national and international issues is now, and will always be, my greatest source of pride.

No man ever served a leader who was more uniformly considerate, more kindly helpful, and more generously appreciative. No subordinate was ever more deeply grateful for the numberless friendly words and acts of his superior.

Pecuniary responsibilities of a substantial nature rest upon me and my private affairs have long demanded attention. During the continuance of actual warfare I did not feel at liberty to weigh these personal considerations in the balance against the public duties with which I was charged. By March 4 of the present year the Department of Justice will have substantially brought its war activities to a close and be working under normal conditions. I therefore ask that this resignation take effect on that date.

Faithfully yours,

T. W. GREGORY.

President Wilson's Reply.

The President's reply said:

My Dear Mr. Attorney General: It is with profound reluctance and regret that I accept your resignation. I do so only because you have convinced me that it is necessary in your own interest for you to retire. There has been no one with whom I have been associated in Washington whom I have learned more to trust nor to whose counsels I have attached more value and importance. Your administration of your office has been singularly able and singularly conscientious, and watchful of the public interest, and I feel that it is a very serious loss indeed to the nation that you should find yourself obliged to withdraw from public life.

My best wishes not only, but my affectionate friendship will follow you into retirement, and I hope with all my heart that in some way and at some time I shall again have the privilege and benefit of being associated with you.

Cordially and faithfully yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

300 SPARTACIDES KILLED OR WOUNDED AS VORWAERTS BUILDING IS WON; SUPREME ALLIED COUNCIL MEETS

FURIOUS BATTLE IN BERLIN

Troops Blow Down Front of Vorwaerts Building With Mine Throwers.

COURTYARD TAKEN BY STORM

Liebknecht and Radeck Said to be Among 500 Spartacides Who Surrendered.

OTHER BUILDINGS ATTACKED

Opposing Forces Fight from Roofs and Windows with Machine Guns and Grenades.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 11, (via Copenhagen, Jan. 12.)—This morning, a whole week after the Spartacides had taken possession of the Vorwärts Building, it was recaptured by Government troops, after an extremely desperate battle. At the same time the truce agreed upon with the Spartacides occupying the other newspaper buildings ceased, the Government troops renewing the attack, which is still progressing.

The Vorwärts Building is situated near the Bellealliance Platz, from which radiate Wilhelmstrasse, Friedrichstrasse, and Lindenstrasse. On Wilhelmstrasse, close to Bellealliance Platz, are the large Beauxenstein printing works, where several daily and weekly newspapers are published. This building, too, was seized early in the week by the Spartacides, and tenaciously defended by them for several days and nights. It was surrendered this morning, after having been under fire of seven-centimeter field guns for several hours. The building took fire and was partly burned. A number of Spartacides are said to have perished in the flames.

Meanwhile artillery had also been placed in position on the roof of the Patent Office, a large palace facing the canal running near Lindenstrasse, where the Vorwärts occupies the premises at No. 3. Guns were also fired from Bellealliance Platz, southwest of Lindenstrasse. This bombardment lasted two hours, the Spartacides replying with heavy machine guns, making it necessary to find cover for the Government's field guns, both on the roof of the Patent Office and in Bellealliance Platz.

About 10 o'clock a white flag was hosted on the Vorwärts Building, whereupon some parleying took place between the contesting parties regarding capitulation. The Spartacides proposed surrender on condition that they be permitted to march away unmolested. This negotiation took place in vacant lots between the Vorwärts Building and the Patent Office. From here it was easily seen that the newspaper structure had suffered severely from the bombardment and could not possibly hold out much longer. Still one more chance was given to the Spartacides to surrender, unconditionally, of course. The Spartacide emissaries went back into the building to consult, but soon returned, saying they preferred to be buried under the ruins.

A few minutes afterward the battle was renewed vigorously, with minethrowers posted in Bellealliance Platz. Their aim was splendid. There were a few tremendous detonations, shattering all the windows in the neighborhood. An enormous cloud of dust arose on Lindenstrasse, and after it had settled it was seen that nearly the whole front of the façade had fallen to the sidewalk. There was a huge gap, through which the havoc wrought in the interior by the bombardment became plainly visible. The falling wall had buried some Spartacide machine guns and their crews.

White Flag Poked from Ruins.

Soon afterward the Spartacide fire ceased entirely, a white flag on a long pole being extended from the ruins.

Meantime, while the bombardment was in progress, Government chasseurs had managed to get very close to the Vorwärts Building, and, succeeding in breaking open a side door, had entered one of three large courtyards. Here a desperate man-to-man fight ensued, hand grenades being employed with murderous results. Grenades were also thrown from the roofs of neighboring houses, to which chasseurs ascended, and the fierce fighting continued for some time, the combatants in these parts of the large building being unaware that the main

Ledebour, Anti-Ebert Leader, is Put Under Arrest; 1,300 Spartacides Reported Slain During Revolt

BERLIN, Jan. 11, (Associated Press.)—Georg Ledebour and Ernst Meyer, Independent Socialists, have been arrested by officers and soldiers. The charge against them has not been made public. Ledebour has been one of the most active leaders against the Ebert Government.

The Vorwärts says that it learns that Dr. Karl Liebknecht has sent his family to Switzerland. It agrees sarcastically that the Communist leader, while expounding the "advantages and blessings of a Bolshevist era" for the Germans, demonstrates the belief that his own family is better off in a country where order is maintained by a "bourgeois and capitalistic Government."

Robert Leinert, Chairman of the Central Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Committee, asserts that Karl Radeck, Chief of the Russian Bolshevist press bureau, has urged the Spartacides to hold out until Russian troops, now on the way, have arrived, the Soldiers' Council of the Tenth Army being willing to permit the Russians to cross the border."

Chairman Leinert states that the German Army in the East has notified him that an invasion of that front by the Russians is impossible, and that not one Soldiers' Council would permit intervention by the Bolshevist troops.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Spartacide losses since the outbreak of the revolution are about 1,300 persons killed, according to Copenhagen advices.

GERMAN CHURCHES UNITE IN POLITICS

GAIN GROUND IN BERLIN

Dr. Dunkelmann, Protestant Theologian, Calls on All Christians to Join the Party.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, Jan. 12.—For the last two weeks there has been in progress an organized movement, under the direction of the Centrist Party, which has its stronghold in the Rheinland, for curbing radicalism in Germany by a union of religious and political bodies. It reckons that if it can join with any considerable faction of Evangelicals it can force the holding of National Assembly elections, and then be in a position to control that assembly, if need be, against the radicals.

This movement started with the statement of the Centrist Party, which I cabled ten days ago, calling on Germans who were foes of destructive radicalism to join the new Centrist Party, which would be a Christian popular party. This opening of the gates of the hitherto Catholic party to Protestants for united Christian action in the national emergency is achieving success, according to Centrist leaders here. In support of this they are laying great stress on a statement by Professor K. Dunkelmann of Berlin, a Protestant theologian, in which he calls on the Protestants to join with the Catholics in a controlling Christian party on a nonsectarian platform for the settlement of foreign and domestic affairs of state, but leaving both religious factions free to pursue their own quarrels after the more urgent needs of the moment have been met.

Pleads for United Front.

Dr. Dunkelmann finds entire justification for such a religious union in the grave dangers confronting Germany today, from Spartacism and other radical elements. He says that the Protestant Church has no experience in politics and would be unable of itself to put a powerful political party in the field, but says that the Centrist Party has political ability and experience, and that the opportunity of the Protestant Church lies in joining political forces with the Catholic Party in the emergency.

"Under these circumstances," his statement said, "the Centrist Party was the only one which could help, and help it did. The new Centrist Party wishes to be nothing but a Christian popular party. It must be admitted that this new formation of the Centrists is founded upon an excellent basis, which is well adapted to the sentiments of the large masses of people and will permit of wide political expansion in the future.

"What would be the use of emphasizing distinctions, to say nothing of controversies, between the Catholic and the evangelical religions at this time, when both Churches are confronted by difficult tasks, in which they are mutually interested, for the

PADEREWSKI SHOT AND SLIGHTLY HURT

SEVERAL REDS ARRESTED

Said to be Implicated in Plot to Kill Famous Pianist and Polish Leader.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Polish leader, has been slightly wounded by a would-be assassin who entered the room of his hotel at Warsaw and fired one shot at him, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen reporting advices from Vienna.

Several Bolsheviki implicated in the plot to kill him have been arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—According to reports received here by the Polish Bureau from Paris headquarters, Paderewski was exceedingly optimistic as to the final success of his mission in Poland. His recent messages all conveyed his confidence that a new Polish coalition Ministry will be established.

"Furthermore, the intimation comes to hand," the statement continues, "that his personal relations with General Pilsudski are on a satisfactory basis. He has made clear to the military dictator that his opposition is not based on the personality of the General, but merely on the all-socialistic character of his Cabinet.

"The hand of Mr. Paderewski has been wonderfully strengthened by the fact that full authority has been given to him by the Poles in German and Austrian Poland to act and speak for them. In both instances the right was conveyed to him by legally organized organs of Polish opinion which had been created by regularly appointed delegate conventions in both territories.

"Under the program which Mr. Paderewski has suggested, the Ministry will be built with four representatives from Prussian Poland, four from Austrian, and eight from Russian Poland, the Socialists in Russian Poland to have four of the seats and the other parties to have four. A coalition Ministry of sixteen would be thus created.

"Mr. Paderewski has also informed the Paris committee that a program for the feeding of Poland is now being worked out in Warsaw and in other sections. He has been advised by the Paris committee that the Polish immigration in America has united with the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee in the contribution of a $2,500,000 food cargo, which is shortly to sail from New York to Danzig, and which will be distributed by Mr. Hoover's aids.

"The Polish National Committee at Paris has made representations to allied Governments that steps must be taken to curb the activities of the Ruthenians, who are killing the women at Lemberg, who are now serving the guns with their brothers and fathers. Reports to that effect have been reaching Paris. It is explained that the Ruthenians are refusing to recognize the right of the women to defend their homes and to assist in military manoeuvres, and are killing all who fall into their hands."

Mr. Paderewski has been in Warsaw several days conferring with political leaders in an attempt to form a Government representative of all parties.

When he reached Danzig on his way to Warsaw the Germans attempted to prevent him from going to Posen. After he arrived at Posen, and while he was asleep in a hotel, a crowd of Germans fired on a parade of children who were marching in honor of Paderewski. Two of the children were killed, and several bullets struck the window of the room occupied by Mr. Paderewski.

WILSON MEETS 3 PREMIERS

CROWDS GREET NOTABLES

MEET IN FOREIGN OFFICE

First Formal Exchange of Views Is Held Under Statue of the Republic.

PARIS, Jan. 12, (Associated Press.)—The Supreme Council of the Peace Congress, consisting of President Wilson and the Premiers and Foreign Ministers of the four great powers, Great Britain, France, the United States, and Italy, met at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the French Foreign Office for the first formal exchange of views and to make arrangements for the procedure of the conference tomorrow, at which the full delegations will be present.

The official statement, issued at the close of the meeting, read as follows:

There was first a meeting of the Supreme War Council, which discussed questions necessary to be settled in connection with the extension of the armistice, which expires on Jan. 17. These discussions absorbed considerably more than half the time of the meeting.

After the Supreme War Council had closed its session, a smaller group, representing France, the United States, Great Britain, and Italy, discussed the method of procedure of the council by which preliminary matters must be carried on.

Today's meeting was chiefly interesting in its personal aspects—the bringing together for the first time in contact of the world's best-known statesmen, who are now the guiding figures of the congress.

The scene as they assembled was one of unusual activity. The day was dark and raw, and the statesmen arrived at the meeting place in heavy wraps. The usual Sunday calm across the Seine was interrupted by the great crowds which lined the Quai d'Orsay, anxious to pay tribute to the notable figures concerned in the world's most dramatic function.

Batteries of photographers and of moving picture experts were drawn up flanking the entrances of the Foreign Ministry. Lines of soldiers and other guards preserved order.

Foch First to Arrive.

Marshal Foch was the first of the high plenipotentiaries to arrive. He came at 2 o'clock, and, finding himself in the van of the delegations, he waited in the vestibule. The Generalissimo was dressed in a very heavy field coat. He wore boots with spurs. On his uniform he displayed the insignia of his rank.

Soon after Foch came Robert Lansing, the American Secretary of State, accompanied by his military aid, who was followed by Mr. Frazer, Counselor of the American Embassy, who is now attached to the person of Colonel House.

At just 2:45 P. M. President Wilson's limousine swung up to the entrance. The President was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and was greeted with cries of "vive Wilson." With the President and his wife was Admiral Grayson, the President's physician.

As he alighted, President Wilson lifted his hat to Mrs. Wilson, who drove away with Admiral Grayson. President Wilson wore a dark suit and overcoat and a silk hat, and carried a large leather portfolio.

As Mr. Wilson entered the vestibule of the Foreign Office Stephen Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, stepped forward to greet him, and escorted him into his private office, where the conference was held.

M. Clemenceau, the French Premier, followed. He was alone and bore a serious mien. He was dressed in a business suit and wore a Derby hat. Signor Orlando, the Italian Premier, came soon afterward, accompanied by Baron Sonnino, his Foreign Minister.

British in Business Attire.

The last to arrive was David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, and Arthur J. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary, who motored up together. The British Premier also was in business attire. Mr. Balfour, in addition to his workday clothes, wore a soft felt hat, which was pushed back on his head. Military aids fol-toured the British Commissioners, carrying a large dispatch case.

In addition to the chief factors announced above were M. Leygues, the French Minister of Marine; M. Clementel, Minister of Commerce, and M. Loucheur, Minister of Industrial Reconstruction.

The conference opened promptly at 3 o'clock. From the offices of M. Pichon the vista was over the gardens of the Foreign Ministry. The desk of M. Pichon had been pushed back, and a large table of Flemish oak substituted.

A large marble statue of the Republic, surmounted by a cap of Liberty, looked down on the assembled statesmen, who found themselves gathered for the first time around the traditional "green table."

The meeting was an extended one. It was mainly for the purpose of settling new terms for prolonging the armistice, which expires Jan. 17, and for determining the number and composition of the delegations of the various countries for the sessions of the Peace Congress which is about to open.

As a result of today's council it is expected that formal notices will be issued convoking the conference, assigning delegations for each country, and the fixing of the hours of meeting.

French Plan a League Committee.

The program which France will propose as host to the Peace Conference is understood to provide first for presentation of the status of a society of nations and the appointment of a committee to consider it and make recommendations to the full conference. The next step would be settlement of the status of Germany, Austria, the Balkans, and other Eastern countries.

The adoption of the recommendations of the Committee on a League of Nations, according to this program, would be the final act of the conference. It is pointed out in support of this method of procedure that, while the announcement of the framework of a League of Nations must form the basis of the other work of the conference, the completed plan of a league logically will come up last, since it must safeguard all the decisions of the conference.

The proposal to give preference to the question of the status of Germany, after the appointment of a League of Nations Committee, is explained by the theory that decisions regarding Austria and the Eastern countries will hinge upon the conclusion reached regarding Germany. It is suggested that it would, for example, be impossible to settle the future of German Austria without knowing the decisions affecting Germany.

When the Peace Conference officially inaugurates its work on Jan. 20, according to the Echo de Paris, there will be brought before it for consideration a memorandum of a French demand for the Sarre Basin. The memorandum will also include a plan for the internationalization of the navigation of the Rhine, with special advantages for nations bordering on that river.

Influential Position for Brazil.

Because of her active participation in the war, particularly her naval activity, Brazil heads the list of the Latin-American Allies and will have an influential voice in the making of peace. Central American nations which declared war and are entitled to representation in the Peace Conference are Panama, Cuba, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Santo Domingo. Uruguay, Peru and Bolivia, which severed relations with the Central Powers, will also be heard at the conference.

A Polish economic delegation of nineteen members, representing the three parties in Poland, has arrived in Paris, to settle food, financial, and other questions.

Le Matin publishes a letter from Chekri Ganem, President of the Syrian Committee, to Premier Clemenceau, asking that, in response to various requests of Syrian organizations, Clemenceau "demand at the Peace Congress that France be intrusted with the reconstitution of all Syria, under a régime of federated autonomous States." The requests, it is asserted, come from organizations in North and South America, Africa, and Europe, representing 600,000 Syrians.

At the Franco-American dinner last night Captain André Tardieu of the French peace delegation said that the conference must simultaneously negotiate a peace treaty and fix the basis of the organization of the new international relationship realizing the principles for which the people had fought. A League of Nations, he said, could be founded only by the peace treaty, which should contain the principles to govern such league.

WANTS AMERICA'S HELP.

Polish Representative in The Hague Tells Country's Needs.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 7.—Speaking to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent at the Polish Legation, Jan Jlodek, who, although not as yet recognized by the Allies, is the Polish representative, and is in close touch with Poland, receiving a special service of news, said:

"The arrival of Paderewski was the signal for the uprising of the Poles against the Germans in Posen. The Polish newspapers welcome Paderewski as the coming President of the Polish Republic, but it is difficult to foretell what his chances are before the election of the Polish Parliament, which takes place on Jan. 26 everywhere in old Poland, and which will be the first sign of unity.

"The Germans are so afraid of the elections uniting Poland that they proclaimed that the Polish vote, as well as propaganda, will be considered high treason. I do not believe there will be serious fighting, and that the Poles will simply drive away the Germans.

"I believe Poland can become a big, organized country if she obtains the moral and economical support of the Allies. We especially hope for help from America, who, up to the present, has shown us great sympathy. President Wilson was the first who defined the Polish question. We also hope to enter into official relations with the Allies and be recognized as a State. Once Poland is recognized she can enter relations with the Entente as an allied Government.

"The Polish army from Paris is expected to arrive at Danzig in a few days and will probably be used as garrison troops in towns.

"We Poles are trying to discontinue the names the Germans gave our towns; for instance, Posen to Poznanje, Lemberg into Lwow, &c., and are using a German map of Poland for propaganda. This map was published in order to show the danger of the Polish populated districts and the necessity for German colonization. The map clearly indicates the real Poland according to German admission."

A Pole who has just arrived at the Hague from Cracow, via Berlin, states that crowds of Germans are now leaving Poland, especially German officials, and their families. The traveller saw few German troops, but says the Poles were joining the Polish army from various parts of Poland.

CZECHS DEMAND ALLIED AID.

Premier Kramarcz Points to the Peril of Austro-German Union.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Premier Kramarcz says the Allies must aid Czechoslovakia in establishing a strong Government so as to prevent an increase of German territory. He is thus quoted in an interview given to a correspondent of Le Temps at Prague:

"The victorious Entente must not permit the German-Austrians to unite with Germany. This terrible war must not permit the increase of German territory. If this union should occur the Czechoslovaks, the allies of the Jugoslavs and the Rumanians, will be overawed by the spectacle of a 'Great Germany.'

"Poland—one cannot disguise it—is in a serious situation. The Poles have occupied the mining districts of Silesia and have seized the Haschau-Oderberg Railroad. We are accused of not sending enough coal to Vienna, but soon we ourselves will be depleted of coal. We have evaded conflicts with the Poles, not wishing that the blood of Slavs shall be spilled.

"The Entente must aid us. We await the arrival of a French military mission to verify the invasion of the Poles into Silesia. We hope the mission will restore order.

"Because the Poles have failed to police their frontier the Bolsheviki have been able to enter our territory to carry on their propaganda. The best remedy would be to solve the food distribution and to force to work those individuals demoralized by Bolshevist appeals to idleness.

"Bohemia needs a strong army to defend itself against its enemies. It will be a rampart against Pan Germanism and will adopt the economic policy of the Entente."

BASLE, Jan. 12.—Karl Renner, the Socialist leader in Austria, said today that the new Cabinet maintained the belief that the Republic of German Austria constituted a part of the German Republic.

POLK SUBSTANTIATES PICHON'S STATEMENT

Says British Memorandum of Overtures on Russia Was Received Jan. 3.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Full confirmation of the statement made yesterday on the authority of Stephen Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, to the effect that the British Government has recently submitted to France and other allied Governments a proposition for a truce in Russia which, if successful, might lead to the admission of Russian Soviet delegates to the Peace Conference, was disclosed in a statement issued tonight by Frank L. Polk, the Acting Secretary of the State Department in the absence of Secretary Lansing.

It appears from Mr. Polk's statement that the memorandum from the British Chargé d'Affaires here, Colville Barclay, in which the British Government's proposition was submitted, was received on Jan. 3. Asserting that the American State Department, assuming that a similar proposal would be presented at Paris, did not forward it to Paris at that time, Mr. Polk yesterday, in response to an inquiry, made an oral statement which led to the assumption here that Washington had never been asked by the British Government to sanction any truce that would lead to the admission of Bolshevist delegates to the Peace Conference. In his statement, issued tonight, Mr. Polk assumes responsibility for any misunderstanding that may have arisen.

"On Jan. 3," said the statement issued by Mr. Polk tonight, "the State Department received from the British Chargé a memorandum that the Allies and the United States call on all the factions in Russia to suspend hostilities pending the peace negotiations, and that if the aforesaid Governments and parties will immediately suspend hostilities on all fronts for the duration of the peace negotiations, even if they, or any of them, should desire to send representatives to Paris to discuss with the Great Powers conditions of a permanent settlement, the Great Powers would be prepared to enter on such a discussion with them.'

"This message was not forwarded to Paris at that time, as it was expected that a similar proposal would be presented at Paris, in view of the fact that the Russian question was one of the subjects for immediate attention there. It would seem, however, from the reports in the newspapers, that no such proposal was presented to the American peace mission in Paris.

"The question was asked me, as I understood it, by a newspaper man yesterday afternoon, as to whether a proposal had been made to have delegates from the Bolsheviki attend the Peace Conference, and reference was made to Mr. Pichon's statement. Not having seen Mr. Pichon's statement, I did not connect the question with the proposal referred to in the memorandum from the British Chargé which had been received by the department, and I, therefore, replied that no such proposal had been received. I wish to assume full responsibility for the misunderstanding."

DENIES INVITING RUSSIANS.

London Sunday Express Says They Were Asked for Programs.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The British Government, The Sunday Express understands, has proposed that all the different parties in Russia, including the Bolsheviki, should present their program to the Peace Congress in order to ascertain if it is possible to come to any understanding with any responsible authority in Russia. The paper adds:

"The French Government is not hostile to this suggestion. There is no difference of opinion between the British and the French Governments, and there has been no idea on the part of the British Government to invite delegates from Russia to attend the Peace Conference."

PARIS, Jan. 12.—If France took the initiative in refusing to deal with the Russian Bolshevist Government, says the Excelsior, the London and Washington Governments made it known that they "agreed absolutely with the French point of view."

WILSONS ATTEND CHURCH.

Crowd Cheers the President as He Leaves the Service.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—President Wilson, Mrs. Wilson, and Miss Margaret Wilson today attended services in Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, in the Avenue George V. The Rev. Charles H. Brent, former Bishop of the Philippine Islands, officiated.

A large crowd outside the church cheered President Wilson as he was leaving the edifice.

The President went to the Headquarters of the American Mission at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and remained in conference with the other American peace delegates nearly two hours.

He also had a conference with H. P. Davison of the American Red Cross, to discuss a plan for the internationalization of the Red Cross. Numerous questions relating to the proposal to put the organization under one head, for reasons of efficiency, were discussed.

GLAD GERMAN REDS HAVE FORCED ISSUE

Member of Berlin Government Says Struggle with Spartacus Element was Bound to Come.

FOOD RELIEF EBERT'S NEED

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 8.—A prominent German politician, a member of the Government, although originally a Conservative, who has just arrived at The Hague after having made a tour through Germany, speaking to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, said:

"The dangerous Spartacus undercurrent had to come to the surface, and the authorities are even relieved that the fighting has begun. Ebert has not been severe enough and his troops are unreliable, but he will now be obliged to use them.

"The Conservatives feel that too many troops have been demobilised. The best soldiers have returned to their homes and businesses, while the bad elements, the homeless and workless, are caught by the Spartacus Party. We think Ebert's German Democratic Party will finally get a majority. Even the Conservatives hope it will.

"It is quite possible that the Spartacus Party will be able to prevent elections in Berlin, Hamburg, and Bremen by taking possession of the ballots by force of arms and a few machine guns. Many National Liberals and Conservatives are voting for the German People's Party.

"Ebert, however, cannot maintain the present Government unless Germany receives food. The people already are discontented, but if he is obliged to reduce the distribution of food the people will revolt still more and Bolshevism will spread. There is still great depression among the upper classes. The people have become very apathetic since the armistice and feel helpless. There is a large class who amuse themselves, and New Year's Eve was a scene of the wildest revelry ever seen in Berlin, in spite of a waiters' strike. At 9 o'clock the following morning the underground railways were full of revellers coming home from dances, dishevelled and rowdy.

"Many people believe Germany's best card is bankruptcy and the assertion that she cannot pay, but this is impossible on such a large scale. Germany, however, will be bankrupt unless something is done within a few weeks.

"We feel Roosevelt's death will act in favor of Germany's cause and hope that Wilson will be re-elected. Many Germans still hope to go to America after the war, believing it to be the one place possible for emigration and where hatred is not so intense.

"Wilson's theories in regard to a League of Nations with a court of jurisdiction are very fine, but as long as there are human passions and hatred there will be wars. I see countless wars to come."

HINDENBURG FORMING A DEPENDABLE ARMY

Selected Division of Veterans from Each Corps to be Set Aside to Maintain Order.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, Jan. 12.—Hindenburg, as Commander in Chief of the German Army, is trying to build up a relatively small, but assuredly dependable force. It is believed from the wording of an order for this purpose that the artillery is intended for potential use to maintain order within Germany.

His confidential order to army commanders orders that one division from each army corps be set aside and maintained after demobilization. He prescribes that divisions shall be selected which have seen heavy fighting, and the order further says:

"Cadres of these divisions should consist of as many active officers as possible; they should be abundantly supplied with ammunition, possess a sufficient number of ammunition columns, and the machine gun companies should be up to strength in men and material. Doubtful elements must be discreetly eliminated."

Volunteers from among demobilized soldiers are being recruited for the purpose of defending Germany from aggression from the East and for maintaining order within the nation. Accurate data as to these volunteers is not available as this recruiting is being done very quietly, but it is believed their number is considerable.

It is a remarkable development that the Iron Cross—that decoration so highly prized by German fighting men for so many years—now that militarism has put Germany where she is, has altogether lost its popularity. It is common enough to be approached on the street by an ex-soldier or some one else offering to sell an Iron Cross as a souvenir, not a new one from some store, but one bearing the name and rank of a German soldier, showing that it was awarded for deeds performed.

More than this, among the demobilised soldiers one seldom sees the decoration ribbon worn. There is certainly no regulation against it, but the Iron Cross seems to have lost its lustre. It seems no longer to glorify the wearer. No one explains it, although many ask why. One local newspaper contains an editorial on the subject. It says, in part:

"Honorable decorations won by acts of valor are forever prised. Why, then, have the black and white ribbons of the Iron Cross, our only war decoration, and the most beautiful of all ornaments of officer and soldier, disappeared today completely? It was the reward of conduct without fear and without reproach in bloody battles, east and west and north and south; it was a recognition of deeds of personal valor which often were prodigious; was the balm desired by the mortally wounded warrior; now it is relegated to a quiet corner of the house. Is it possible to be ashamed to wear in public a decoration earned by courage during nearly five years of war?"

Certainly in the minds of allied soldiers there is no stigma attached to wearing the Iron Cross. Far from it, for allied soldiers respect the military decorations of the German Army, as they leave untouched Germany's military monuments. Iron Crosses have simply gone out of sight, perhaps through one of those tricks of German psychology as inexplicable as their calling Americans swine one day and inviting them to dinner the next.

Yesterday the German risked death to earn the Iron Cross; today he will not admit he has one.

body of Spartacides had already offered to surrender.

The first prisoners led from the building were four civilian Russians, it was said, among them the notorious Muscovite emissary Radeck. It was also said that Liebknecht was seized, but this cannot be confirmed.

It is rumored that 300 Spartacides were killed or wounded. The number of prisoners is about 500. Some 1,200 rifles, over 100 machine guns, and great stores of ammunition were captured.

Toward 5 o'clock this evening street fighting became very general, the Spartacides throwing grenades at the troops and guards stationed at street corners.

They will suddenly fire from the roofs of houses or from windows at the crowds in the streets. Most of the street lamps having been shot to pieces, darkness favors these unpleasant surprises, which are keeping the soldiers constantly on the run and creating panic among the public.

There is method in this madness, the purpose being to distract the attention of the Government soldiers and prevent connected action on Police Headquarters and other Spartacide fortresses.

The Government soldiers are extremely irritated and are handling the Spartacides severely when caught. A company of loyal soldiers marched along Kurfuerstenstrasse this afternoon. A Spartacide got among them and tried to dissuade some of them. He was driven away, but when caught again was shot down in the street.

While THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent was writing these lines at Kempinske's, a large restaurant, it was suddenly darkened and the doors were locked. From both the Leipzigerstrasse and Krausenstrasse we hear the tac-a-tack of machine guns. Loyal troops and Spartacides are fighting each other in streets from the windows and roofs.

TROOPS ARE TURNING TIDE TOWARD EBERT

Government Now Plainly in Ascendent Owing to Loyalty of Troops.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—All reports from Berlin, including dispatches direct from that city, indicate that the Government is now definitely in the ascendent.

The troops, who after a brave show at the outset repeatedly showed themselves accessible to Spartacide persuasions, have now apparently arrayed themselves definitely and decisively on the side of the Government.

Copenhagen, however, reports that fighting has been resumed in Berlin. The Spartacides are said to be still holding a part of the Tageblatt Building.

PARIS, Jan. 12, (Havas.)—Semi-official advises from Berlin indicate that the insurrection is decreasing in power and it no longer seems doubtful that the Ebert-Scheidemann Government has been maintained by the troops whose discipline has been strengthened by the presence in the city of Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

Karl Liebknecht is reported to have proclaimed a "red terror" and a dictatorship. The proletarians say a general strike "to save the revolution" has been called for Jan. 19, which has been fixed as the date for the election to the General Assembly.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—Newspaper Row, where the plants of the Tageblatt, Vossische Zeitung, and Lokal Anzeiger are located, was temporarily quiet this morning as the result of a truce patched up Friday night between the Government forces and the Spartacides. The armistice, which was not without elements of humor, was dictated by the urgent need of the civilian population living in the danger zone to attend to its marketing and to afford the business firms in the neighborhood an opportunity to look over the situation.

The losses of the Spartacides during the fighting in this district Friday are said to have been heavy, while the Government troops say that only two of their men were wounded.

During yesterday afternoon a squad of Spartacides attempted to enter the Tageblatt building in a motor car flying a Red Cross flag on the pretext that they wanted to bring out the dead and wounded. The Government troops halted the car and found that the occupants were armed with revolvers and hand grenades.

For a week the greater part of Germany has been without news from the outside world as a result of the seizure of the Berlin office of the semi-official Wolff Bureau by the Spartacides. The German press is dependent upon the Wolff Bureau for home and foreign news.

The insurgents also halted the publication of half a dozen of the largest newspapers and the few papers that were able to appear were poorly informed as to local occurrences and were without information of happenings outside Berlin. There has been no news of President Wilson and his activities, about which the Berliners are interested.

The publishers of the newspapers seized by the insurgents are wondering over indemnification for the losses of the week and about the damage to their newspaper plants, but the Government apparently is little concerned about this minor result of the activities of the Spartacides.

In a speech in Berlin Thursday night Obinrich Sepuls, a former member of the Reichstag and now a member of the Ebert-Scheidemann Government, declared that the Independent Socialists had agreed to accept all the Government's conditions for the ending of the fighting in Berlin, even to the extent of releasing the occupied newspaper plants, in return for a postponement for three months of elections to the National Assembly. Sepuls declared that the Spartacides feared that the elections would result in their defeat.

At a public meeting Thursday night, a Spartacus League speaker declared that while propaganda among Government troops had proved a failure, armed Spartacide guards from all sections of Germany were on their way to Berlin.

On the other hand, the Government received advises from Kiel that the so-called "Iron Division," comprising two regiments of volunteers from the army and navy recently organized by Herr Noske, who now is in charge of the Government forces in Berlin, was leaving for the capital.

THIEVES LOOT BERLIN AS CIVIL WAR RAGES

People of Hamburg Foil Plans of Spartacides—Outbreak at Dresden.

By LEONARD SPRAY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 11.—The Berlin telegraphists today demanded higher wages and presented an ultimatum to the Government that unless their demands were granted in full they would strike within five days.

Quite apart from the hostilities, the state of affairs in Berlin has become worse in the last two days. Taking advantage of the fighting, the unemployed and criminals are very active, and are becoming a serious menace to the public safety.

The disorderly element has been augmented by thousands of evildoers who have come into the city from elsewhere and have managed by joining the Red Guards to obtain arms.

Today there was looting on a big scale, especially of small shops in the poorer quarters, while in certain districts a reign of terror has been set up by organized bands who, provided with motor lorries, are carrying out pillaging expeditions. The shopkeepers have also to contend with "requisitions" by Spartacides.

There is thus arising a condition of anarchy which is a great embarrassment to the Government in the midst of its struggle with the revolutionaries.

A Bolshevist outbreak was planned at Hamburg, but wind of the plot reached their opponents, who got a blow in first. This morning a "public security force" established in the city took the offensive against the Soldiers' Council, of which the Bolsheviki had secured control. Arming themselves, they marched to the Town Hall, followed by a huge crowd of workers, and forced an entrance into the office of the Bolshevist leader, Lauenberg. They took him on to a balcony with the intention of making him deliver a speech dictated by themselves. His appearance, however, was the signal for such an uproar that speechmaking was out of the question.

Thereupon seven soldiers constituted themselves a court-martial for immediate trial and gave Lauenberg an opportunity to make a speech in defense. He was arguing that he was no Spartacide when the crowd broke into the room and tried to lynch him. This was only prevented with the greatest difficulty. A majority of the Socialists organized a force for his protection and eventually he was smuggled away in disguise by a back door and disappeared in a motor car.

The latest scene of Bolshevist disorders is Dresden. Yesterday the leaders of the movement there issued a proclamation in response to which huge crowds of unemployed and strikers assembled. Forming in procession, they went to the circus Sarrasani, where arrangements had been made for a meeting of the Soldiers' Council.

The Bolsheviki obtained possession of the building and held a meeting of their own at which the Saxon Liebknecht, Nuehle, made an incendiary speech. After this the rioters went to the Town Hall where they overpowered the guard and got away with a large quantity of arms and munitions.

SPARTACIDE UPRISING STIRS DUSSELDORF

Police and Disarmed Soldiers Start Trouble—Jails Open, Town Treasury Seized.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUSSELDORF, Jan. 9.—Bolshevism has appeared at Düsseldorf. I have this morning talked with Belgian officers in charge of the frontier of the occupied territory, with the Burgomaster of Düsseldorf, Herr Knopp, and with other citizens of the town.

While I was talking with the Belgian Commandant some one came from beyond the river to ask that troops might march in and restore order. An anxious, nervous man he was, who smiled and smiled, but with the answer that Marshal Foch had laid down the limits of allied action he was dismissed.

Since the revolution, Düsseldorf has been controlled by a Workmen's and Soldiers' Council under the guidance of Independent Socialists. Actual power lay with the police reinforced by reserve police, a sort of special constable, and by a volunteer regiment of about 1,000 demobilized soldiers. This last body drew pay at a high rate, 15 marks a day.

When they read the report that by order of the Allies they were to be disarmed and disbanded they became disciples of Spartacus. A considerable proportion of the 750 police and special constables discovered that they were of the same faith. The loyal section was then disarmed and the police stations occupied. Crowds filled the streets. There was a disturbance at the Rheinische Metallwerk, and force majeure was applied to the newspapers. The Burgomaster and others withdrew across the river. Some people prominent in politics or industrially have been arrested by Spartacus mobs.

This morning the news is that the prisons have been thrown open, so that the Düsseldorf criminals are free to prey upon the town without the Constables meddling, that mobs have seized the town treasury, and that Spartacides control the telegraph and telephone services, isolating the town from the world.

On the other hand some sort of agreement has been made between the President of the Police and Workmen's Council that there shall be no disorder. The newspapers have obtained their freedom again. The public services—gas, electricity, and water—are all in order.

It is agreed that up to the present there has been no physical violence. Spartacides are armed with revolvers and hand grenades, but as yet the Revolution of Düsseldorf is bloodless. I am told that there will probably be a good deal of looting tonight, and obviously the situation has possibility of dangerous development.

As usual I hear of agitators and agents of foreign discontent. It is believed in Düsseldorf that the affair was contrived or instigated from Berlin. There is evidence of liaison between the Spartacides of Düsseldorf and Russia.

The leader of the rising is one Gehel, who was before the war a marriage broker and during the war a deserter, and has lately published in Holland a violent paper of his own. A Russian Jewess called Feuerstein, who came to Düsseldorf in some capacity connected with the Bolshevist news agency in Germany, is believed to provide the link with Petrograd.

DISORDER INCREASES IN GERMAN CITIES

Radicals Spread Infection Outside of Capital; Clashes in Munich, Dresden, and Ratisbon.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Stories of outbreaks, mostly by instigation of the Spartacides, in several German cities, come from the Continent. A Havas dispatch from Paris suggests that the radicals have transferred the struggle to the provinces, where they seem to be gaining what they have lost in the capital.

Serious fighting, it is said, has developed in Munich, where the Government has forbidden all demonstrations.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Munich, the Cabinet went into temporary hiding when Spartacides arrived to demand the release of two imprisoned Bolsheviki. When they threatened to force the building, Premier Eisner put his head from a window and succeeded in calming the rioters.

"I would rather die than be forced to admit that civil war is prevailing in Munich," he said.

In Stuttgart the Spartacides are masters of the City Hall and the Municipal Council has been dissolved.

Strikers in the Westphalia region now number 100,000.

In Dresden, says an Associated Press dispatch from that city, the radicals attempted to capture the plant of the Dresden Volkszeitung Friday, but were repulsed with heavy machine gun and hand grenade fire. The clash resulted in the death of twenty persons and the wounding of several scores. The Spartacide leader, Rhuele, was taken prisoner.

Previous to the attack on the newspaper plant Rhuele had circulated communistic handbills demanding that the elections to the National Assembly be stopped, by armed intervention if necessary.

A Socialist republic has been proclaimed at Bremen, according to a dispatch from Munich to Basle. The communists in Bremen have taken the places of the Majority Socialists on the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council and have sent a message to the Ebert Government demanding that they resign. They are also reported to have sent a telegram to the Russian Bolsheviki expressing the hope that the revolutions in Russia and Germany would be victorious.

Many persons were killed or wounded in Ratisbon, Bavaria, in fighting Friday afternoon. The troubles occurred in various quarters of the town, and 500 State railway employes had to be called upon to restore order. A state of siege was proclaimed.

The situation in Halle, one of the most important railway junctions in Northern Germany, was reported as critical Friday. Machine guns were mounted on several buildings and street fighting was expected.

The City Hall at Spandau, which was vacated Monday, was the scene Friday of heavy fighting between Government troops and the Spartacides, says a Berlin dispatch. The building was attacked with light artillery and machine-gun fire at 7 o'clock and then stormed. The Spartacides offered stubborn resistance, but after a heavy hand grenade bombardment they were overwhelmed and their leaders captured.

Hert Pleser, the ringleader of the Liebknecht forces in Spandau, was summarily executed in the court of the Post Office building. Other Spartacides were thrown into the cellar of the jail.

Spandau is the site of great army artillery depots and its inhabitants are regarded as the most turbulent workmen living in any of the Berlin suburbs. While it was in the possession of the Spartacides they arrested leaders of the Majority Socialists and in retaliation the Socialists withdrew from the Soldiers and Workmen's Council.

EISNER ISSUES APPEAL FOR PEACE

Fratricidal War Means Germany's Ruin, Bavarian Wires Berlin Government.

MUNICH, Jan. 12.—Premier Eisner of Bavaria has telegraphed to the Berlin Government an appeal that the warfare there be brought to an end. The telegram says:

"With growing horror we follow the murderous civil war. It must end, unless all Germany is slowly to perish. Berlin's example is having a demoralizing effect everywhere, and is producing an epidemic of insanity. The only means of salvation appears to be a Government sustained by the confidence of the people, comprising all Socialist parties and resolved to bring democracy and Socialism to victory. Everywhere in South Germany the anger against Berlin is growing. At the same time sinister persons here are calling also for fratricidal warfare."

a customer told us that the counsel he had received from the Bankers Trust Company in regard to his business had been most helpful and had kept him from making some costly mistakes.

Under existing circumstances making his financial plans is one of the most difficult tasks confronting the business man. If he has established banking relations with a strong service-giving institution like the Bankers Trust Company, and may draw on its accumulated business knowledge and experience in every phase of finance, he is especially fortunate.

SEPARATISM GAINING IN RHINE REGIONS

Returning French Look for a German Federation with Prussia Excluded.

GERMAN AUSTRIA MAY JOIN

Conservatism of Southern Catholics Expected to Reject Union with Northern Bolsheviki.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—French soldiers just back from the occupied zone in Germany say that a separatist movement is steadily gaining strength in the territory on both banks of the Rhine. An officer belonging to the Information Department of the Headquarters Staff, who had special opportunities for observation, told me today:

"The way the situation is developing now looks as if the outcome might ultimately be a federation of South and West German States, probably including German Austria. At the beginning the Government would doubtless be a Moderate Socialist republic, but the strong Catholic forces would make for stability and gradually swing power to the hands of the bourgeoisie and what the British call the upper middle class.

"Already the spread of Bolshevism in Prussia has filled Southern and Western Germany with alarm, and unless the Berlin Government can thoroughly crush the Spartacides I doubt greatly whether either Bavaria or the Rhine provinces would agree to form a part of any federation containing such a dangerous element.

"Conditions are not dissimilar in German Austria, although the position there is rendered more acute by the food shortage, where the strength of Catholicism is also great. Of course, the danger of such a breakaway from North Germany would be that the latter might be forced into the arms of the Russian Bolsheviki. But if allied aid to Poland is anything but mere words the reconstituted Polish State ought to prove an effective buffer."

Curiously enough some such federation of South and West Germany was outlined to me as long ago as early September by one of the ablest French Generals as being the best possible safeguard for France after victory. He emphasized the fact that the inhabitants of these territories had been in the main peaceable and friendly to France until hypnotized by the Prussian dream of world dominion, and he added that Europe would never be really secure from future war until the Pan German bloc was broken up.

HALTED PRINCE OF WALES.

Americans' Target Practice Stopped After Warning by German.

COBLENZ, Jan. 12.—The Prince of Wales this morning completed a two-day visit to the American bridgehead. Last night he was the guest of the staff of the Third Army at a dinner and dance at the Officers' Club.

The Prince's party yesterday was on the way to visit the American Fourth Army Corps headquarters at Coblenz when the forward car was stopped at a little hamlet by an excited German, who said that the place was being shot up.

It was found that an American machine-gun company with a range beyond a big hill was firing high and the bullets were coming into the village through which the Prince's party was about to pass. Captain Louis Graves, American Army Press Section, went ahead and had the shooting stopped, after which the Prince proceeded on his way.

COBLENZ, Jan. 11, (Associated Press.)—A flight over the Coblenz bridgehead area, a luncheon with Major Gen. Muir and a dinner dance occupied the time today of the Prince of Wales, who is the guest of Major Gen. Dickman, commander of the American Army of Occupation.

The Prince professed keen pleasure in his visit to the American aerodromes and the airplane trip was at his request. He went up with Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, Chief of Air Service of the Third Army. It was General Mitchell's last flight at Coblenz, as he is leaving Sunday for duty in the United States.

The Prince was in the air for forty-five minutes. He was taken up the Mosselle, across the Rhine, and then flew down the Rhine from the Lorelei rock to Neuwied and back to the aerodrome near Coblenz. The flight was made in a two-seater Spad used as a pursuit airplane. The Prince studied the maps during the entire flight. He declared afterward that the flight was the most picturesque he ever had.

After the luncheon with General Muir at Cochem the Prince attended a vaudeville program given by enlisted men. The program included fancy dancing and the Prince kept time with his cane and his feet, apparently enjoying the occasion thoroughly.

COBLENZ, Jan. 12.—Today I met on the street a Major, a friend of mine. He told me he had just received orders to go home. I started to congratulate him. He stopped me.

"Don't say it," he said. "I am in the regulars, you know, and I have got to go home and serve under a man who was my junior before we entered the war. I have been over here fighting for a year, but he has gone up faster than I. It's sort of rough, I say."

Still thinking of what he had said, I walked into the office of another officer. He happened to be a Major, too.

"Mr. Correspondent," he said, "you have been boosting what we have done over here. You have called it good work. You're wrong. They did better work back home. Look here. Read those two paragraphs."

He shoved across the desk a copy of a college weekly. The first paragraph he had marked read: "Major —— was promoted to his present rank shortly after his advancement to a Captaincy. He is still with the —— Field Artillery at Camp Jackson."

The second paragraph he had marked read: "It has just been learned from the War Department that ——, a Lieutenant of Company —— of the —— Infantry, died on Oct. 15 from wounds received in action."

"I brought —— over," the Major said. "He fought six months and died a Lieutenant."

GREGORY TO QUIT CABINET IN MARCH

1915, and Lindley M. Garrison as Secretary of War in 1916.

Mr. Bryan resigned rather than sign one of the notes which President Wilson had prepared for dispatch to Germany in connection with the submarine campaign. Mr. Garrison resigned after having differed with President Wilson regarding the project then under way for the formation of a Continental Army. Mr. McReynolds resigned to accept appointment as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

No other change in the President's official family occurred until Mr. McAdoo recently announced that he felt compelled to leave the Government's service for financial reasons. Carter Glass of Virginia was appointed and installed as the Secretary of the Treasury, and Walker D. Hines has just been appointed Director General of Railroads in place of Mr. McAdoo.

Gregory's Career in Texas.

Mr. Gregory's home is in Texas, but he was born in Mississippi. After graduating from the Southwestern Presbyterian University in 1883 he became a special student at the University of Virginia, graduated from the law department of the University of Texas in 1885 and began the practice of law at Austin, Texas, the same year. For eight years he was a Regent of the University of Texas and in 1892 he declined appointment as Assistant Attorney General of Texas. Four years later he declined an appointment to the Texas State bench. Mr. Gregory was a delegate from Texas to the Democratic Convention at St. Louis in 1904 and a delegate at large to the Baltimore convention which nominated Mr. Wilson for the Presidency. His law firm, Gregory & Batts, was specially employed by the State of Texas to prosecute its suit against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, a part of the Standard Oil Trust. On May 20, 1913, he was appointed a special assistant to Attorney General McReynolds in the investigation and proceedings concerning the affairs of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway Company, and when Mr. McReynolds went to the Supreme Court Mr. Gregory was made the Attorney General.

benefit of those parts of the people which belong to them, respectively?

"In this connection this characteristic of the Evangelical Church is important, namely, that on account of its subjective and internal attributes it is impossible for it to form an independent political party. Its religious impetus could only make itself felt in connection with some body of political tendencies such as the Conservatives. The situation is entirely different as regards the Centrist Party, which is equipped not only with religious unity, but also with political experience, which seem to warrant the hope that a civilian party with religious principles would be able to stand on its own feet. As things stand the proper policy for Evangelical people is indicated. It would be extremely satisfactory if they would join the Centrist Party. Whatever fears of success that party would otherwise inspire would become groundless if the Centrist Party should succeed in attracting considerable bodies of the Evangelical people to its ranks.

"Moreover, it should not be forgotten that the elections with which we are concerned are to a national assembly and not to a gathering of representatives of different States. In these latter differences religious grounds are inevitable in the future as in the past. At the National Assembly a general regulation of Church and State will be made, also legal regulations governing the influence of the Church on the public life of the people."

Unite Wider Symbol of Cross.

After saying that on purely general questions there was no reason why the two religious schools should not work together for the common good, Dr. Dunkelmann says: "As against three branches of the Social Democracy an adequate counterweight can only be brought to bear by a solid phalanx including all middle-class parties, and it is the mission of the new Centrist Party as a Christian popular party, to form the nucleus of this phalanx around which all other well-balanced elements, and especially those of the Protestant faith, will be able to rally.

"This is what is happening, for example, in places where the danger of Bolshevism and the danger of control by the Social Democracy is most apparent—namely, in Berlin. Evangelical elements are known to have contributed largely to the New Year's demonstration made by Centrists in Berlin. This demonstration was made in admirable form—by the raising of the cross in Berlin, that city which has become so disgracefully heathen in its practices—and was the forerunner of a real crusade, intended to save, and it is hoped that it will save, our Fatherland from the power of infidels on Jan. 19."

He then quotes the declaration of the Centrist party, as follows:

"The new Centrist party is a Christian popular party, membership in which is not limited to any particular denomination. All citizens of the nation who are of the Christian religion may join in regarding it as a foundation for political activity."

Dr. Dunkelmann concludes: "This is the right policy. The old fight between adherents of the two denominations must now cease in the face of the common enemy and common danger which threatens every Christian community, and all those who acknowledge the cross. Instead of jealousy there must be rivalry in the performance of duties devolving upon citizens and Christians, each part doing its best to ward off the enemy and to preserve the Christian life of the people. Competition of this sort will bear important fruits in the future."

While Spartacides appear to be causing much disturbance at Düsseldorf and are attempting to make progress in other Rhine towns, they have not raised their heads in territory occupied by American troops.

The American command has made up its mind to deal summarily with any attempts by this radical faction to stir up trouble, although seemingly they would have scant chance of success, in view of the almost unanimous antipathy for the Spartacides in this section.

ALBERT'S PLANE DISABLED.

King, with Noted Belgian Aviator, Reaches the Ground Unhurt.

PARIS, Jan. 11, (Associated Press.)—King Albert of Belgium, flying yesterday morning with Albert Combez, the noted Belgian aviator who finished fourth in the international airplane race at Rheims in 1913, was forced to land two miles from Attigny on the Aisne when the motor stalled.

Both occupants of the machine escaped injury and the plane was undamaged.

BRITISH CABINET SUBJECT TO CHANGE

London Press Regards It as Merely an Interim Ministry Pending Final Peace.

CHURCHILL A SURPRISE

Appointment Viewed as Test of Lloyd George's Ability to Meet Severe Criticism.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—No great enthusiasm has been shown by the London newspapers over the announcement of the new Cabinet. It is generally accepted as an interim Ministry, and the opinion is freely expressed that there will be many changes when the Peace Conference is over and the country settles down to the work of reconstruction.

The Liberal Westminster Gazette describes the Cabinet as a "reshuffled Ministry," thereby, for once, agreeing with the Tory Morning Post, and there is a good deal of criticism of the inclusion of men like Walter Long and Austen Chamberlain, who belong to the older school of politicians and are not, it is contended, of really first-rate calibre.

Dealing with this line of comment today, The Times's political correspondent says:

"The Premier's reply to his critics would be that he has been conditioned by circumstance, with the certainty that for the next few months he will be preoccupied with the Peace Conference. He could not hazard any radical reconstruction of the Ministry. He is like the head of a business who is called away for an indefinite time, and no one in that position would think the time opportune to choose new and untried heads of departments. That is true in a way, but no sane employer would leave his business in the hands of men whose inefficiency had been clearly demonstrated. The weakness of the Premier's position is that while he and Bonar Law are away there will be no one with the disposition and driving force, if we exclude Churchill, to give the right send-off to the promised measures of reconstruction, which, in the circumstances, will probably hang fire till the Premier is back."

The most sensational of appointments is that of Winston Churchill to both the War Office and Air Ministry. Not only does it show the Premier is strong enough to meet severe criticisms at putting Churchill in charge of the army at the moment when a reorganization, made necessary by the changes in the art of war, requires great soundness of judgment, but also because it appears to settle definitely the position the new air force will occupy in the future.

The continued independence of the air service has many strong advocates here, but it seems that those who argued that the aviators must be as completely controlled by the Imperial General Staff as the artillerymen have prevailed.

Much interest is taken also in the appointment of Sir S. H. Sinha to the Under Secretaryship of India. Of it the Westminster Gazette remarks:

"He is the first native of India to sit in the British Government, and we take his appointment as some guarantee that the legitimate claims of India to a larger measure of self-government are to be met."

MANY SHIPS IN DISTRESS.

Nova Scotia Wireless Kept Busy with the Calls from Steamers.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 12.—Wireless stations along the Nova Scotia Coast were kept busy today and tonight recording messages from steamers in distress. The most serious case appeared to be that of the American steamer Castalia, to whose help several steamers rushed yesterday upon receipt of word that she was in danger of sinking. The Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord and the British steamer War Fijian were standing by her tonight, waiting for better weather before attempting to take off her crew.

The American steamer G. A. Flagg, which reported yesterday that she was disabled, was towed into this port today.

A message from the American steamer Tuckahoe today said that she was leaking badly, but hoped to be able to reach Halifax without assistance. Tonight she was reported to be 160 miles from here and a tug was sent to her help.

Late tonight a wireless call for help came from the Italian steamer Ansaldo, about 120 miles southeast of Sable Island. Her helm was disabled.

PROPOSAL TO BANISH EX-KAISER TO ALGERIA

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—France, according to the Paris correspondent of the National News, intends to propose the banishment of the ex-Kaiser and his sons to Algeria. The correspondent writes:

"I have been permitted to see a preliminary draft of the demands which the French General Staff will put forward at the Peace Conference. While I am not at liberty to disclose any details of those demands which deal with the handing over of territory and questions of the geographical settlement generally, I can state that it will be demanded that the ex-Kaiser, ex-Crown Prince, and all the other male members of the German Imperial family shall be permanently exiled to Algeria, where they will reside under the jurisdiction of the Commander in Chief of the 19th Army Corps, which includes the French Foreign Legion."

The reason assigned for this move is that "the heavily financed Bund der Kaisertreuen" (League of Loyal Kaiser Adherents) is trying to make use of the feeling of the middle class in Germany that there is more hope of a return of quiet under the restored Kaiser than under a hastily organized republic.

The French General Staff, the correspondent says, wish to treat the Kaiser as a military prisoner and to exile him as an act of conquest, and it does not favor the proposal to give him a formal trial.

France to Return Steamers.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—All mail steamers, which were requisitioned by the Government during the war, it is announced, will be placed at the disposal of their owners before Feb. 15.

ing drilled under the direction of Rear Admiral Garcia.

Two hundred agitators thus far have been arrested. None of them has been placed in jail, but all of them have been interned aboard warships or in the military barracks. They include a widely known anarchist who had been riding wildly through the city on horseback, agitating open rebellion.

The food situation in Buenos Aires was more critical today. Meat was not obtainable, and vegetables were scarce. The prices for vegetables were so high that the poor were unable to purchase them. The few milkmen who succeeded in receiving supplies from suburban farms agreed to pour the milk into the gutters, fearing that they were likely to meet the fate of their comrade who attempted to serve milk in the Plaza Hotel Saturday.

Americans to Feed Army.

General Dellepaine today accepted the offer of an American packing house to supply the army and the police force with beef. The offer, however, did not extend to the public.

Some of the street railroads were operating today with infantrymen on the platforms.

The city was permeated today by a thick white smoke from burning garbage. The garbage for several days has been dumped on the street corners, and it was considered necessary by the Board of Health that it should be disposed of in order to prevent possible pestilence.

The commanders of the Government troops, officially report 250 dead and 700 wounded as a result of the riots. The ranking naval officer, discussing this report, said: "If you double it, you will be nearer the real casualties."

Sixty-nine persons were buried Friday and Saturday in one cemetery. A heavy military escort accompanied the trucks which bore the bodies in coffins to the cemetery, and armed forces stood guard during the burials.

General Dellepaine has issued an order prohibiting labor organizations from meeting. The Congressional Palace is defended by artillery and a contingent of troops under direct order of Parliament. Censorship throughout the republic, including marine cables, is expected to become effective tonight.

RAIDS ON ENGLAND COST 1,570 LIVES

295 CHILDREN SLAIN

Vast Majority of Victims Were Civilians, Including 411 Women Killed and 1,210 Wounded.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—In raids on England by the Germans during the war 5,511 persons were killed or injured, of whom 4,750 were civilians. The deaths numbered 1,570. An official summary of the casualties caused by German airships, airplanes and bombardments from the sea shows these casualties among civilians:

Killed, 554 men, 411 women, 295 children.

Injured, 1,508 men, 1,210 women, 772 children.

Three hundred and ten soldiers and sailors were killed and 551 were injured.

There were fifty-one raids by airships, causing the deaths of 498 civilians and the injury of 1,236, and the killing of 58 soldiers and sailors and the injuring of 121.

In fifty-nine airplane raids 619 civilians were killed and 1,650 were injured. In these raids 238 soldiers and sailors were killed and 400 injured.

In twelve bombardments from the sea 143 civilians were killed and 604 wounded, while 14 soldiers and sailors were killed and 30 injured.

The greatest losses inflicted by Zeppelins were in raids on Norfolk, Suffolk and the home counties of London on Oct. 13, 1915, when 54 civilians and 17 soldiers and sailors were killed, and in West Suffolk and the midland counties on Jan. 31, 1916, when 70 civilians were killed and 112 injured. The raid on Lincolnshire, Essex and Suffolk on March 31 of the same year caused the death of 17 civilians and 31 soldiers and sailors.

The most serious airplane raid was that of Margate, Essex and London, on June 13, 1917, when 158 civilians and four sailors and soldiers were killed. The next in severity was that of Kent, on Sept. 4 of the same year, when 131 soldiers and sailors lost their lives. On this occasion a crowded barracks was hit. Almost as severe as the raid on Kent was that on Folkestone, on May 25, 1917, when 77 civilians and 18 sailors and soldiers were killed. The attack on Kent, Essex and London, on Jan. 28, 1918, caused the death of 65 civilians and two soldiers and sailors.

The only bombardment from the sea in which there were heavy casualties was that on Hartlepool, Scarborough and Whitby on Dec. 16, 1914, when 127 civilians and 10 soldiers and sailors were killed and 567 civilians and 25 soldiers and sailors were injured.

JAPAN RECALLS RESERVES.

30,000 to Quit Russia—25,000 Typhus Cases at Ekaterinburg.

VLADIVOSTOK, Jan. 9, (Associated Press.)—The Japanese are preparing for the withdrawal of their reserve forces, consisting of regiments stationed in Manchuria and Siberia. Concentration for this purpose will take place from Feb. 10 to 20 and will affect 30,000 men.

There are 25,000 cases of typhus fever in Ekaterinburg, Chellabinsk, and Omsk, according to Captain Reifsnider, who has just returned here after completing a two months' trip through Siberia for the American Red Cross. At an average ten patients daily were taken out of the crowded station in Ekaterinburg.

GOT SINN FEIN CONSTITUTION

Dublin Raiders Also Seized Documents on America's Opinions.

DUBLIN, Jan. 11.—In the raid on Sinn Fein headquarters in Harcourt Street today the police found, among other documents, a draft of a new Irish Constitution and pamphlets entitled "America's Verdict on Easter Week" and "Casement's Message from America."

Later the police raided the office of Nationality, the chief organ of the Sinn Fein. Crowds assembled in the streets and sang Sinn Fein songs during the raid.

evident from the words in the ring, "American Expeditionary Forces, 1917." It was considered likely that he was on his way home, having recently landed from overseas.

"Sergeant F. D. Harvey, Company F, 32d Michigan Infantry," was the name found on a service ring on another man's body. It showed that he had seen service on the Mexican border in 1916.

Ballar Jones of New York, a negro porter, was the third man to be identified. His body was mangled, and the only means of identification were shreds of his clothing.

A fourth man to be identified was Captain F. Staud-Jiminez, Port Captain and Chief Engineer of the Atlantic Ship Salvage Corporation, 61 Broadway, New York City. This identification was not positive.

The three passengers in the rear coach who escaped instant death were Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Lichterman of Chicago and an unconscious woman, said by the railroad authorities to be Miss Flora Doherty of Flint, Mich. They are in the Batavia Hospital. Miss Doherty is not expected to live through the night. Mrs. Lichterman is more seriously injured than her husband. Her face was terribly torn.

Mrs. Lichterman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gies of New York, are due here tonight. Mr. and Mrs. Lichterman were married only a short time ago and were on their way to Chicago, where Mr. Lichterman is Vice President of the Aberdeen Coat Company.

Trainmen's Stories Vary.

The conductor of the Wolverine was W. A. Starr of New York, and the engineer was W. J. Gibbons of Buffalo. The flagman was Thomas Groves of New York. Superintendent Dinan of the Western Division of the New York Central, was at a loss to explain how the accident happened.

"The flagman says that he went about twenty-five car-lengths to the rear of his train to signal the second train," he explained. "Torpedoes were also put on the rails. The statement of Engineer Friedley differs very materially from that of the flagman. Friedley claims that he did not see the red lamp of the flagman until he was about eight lengths behind the Wolverine. At that point, he says, he heard a torpedo explode. He admits that the signals were set at danger when he went to look at them after the accident."

Superintendent Everitt of Syracuse could not account for the accident, in view of the reliability of Engineer Friedley and all the precautions that had been taken.

"There will be an investigation at my office," said he. "This engineer was one of our most reliable employes. He has been running passenger trains for twenty years. The night was clear and he should have been able to see a mile. I can't understand why he did not see the red marker lamps carried on the rear of the first train."

Floyd Palmer was on duty at Tower No. 37, very close to where the Wolverine stood when the two trains collided. He said that he saw train No. 11 coming at a high speed and, though he believed an accident inevitable, he could do nothing to prevent it.

CROWLEY BLAMES ENGINEER.

Federal Manager Asserts Several Signals Were Passed.

When the first detailed reports of the wreck near Batavia reached the railroad offices in Grand Central Terminal at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, P. E. Crowley, Federal Manager of the New York Central Railroad, and A. H. Smith, Eastern Regional Director of Railroads, were in conference. Mr. Crowley telephoned press associations and newspapers, announcing the accident, and established a special information service, which answered many anxious queries from relatives and friends of persons who had taken the Wolverine.

Mr. Crowley gave out two statements. The first read as follows:

At 3:40 o'clock this morning at South Byron, thirty-five miles east of Buffalo, passenger train No. 11, known as the Southwestern Limited, collided with the rear of the second section of passenger train No. 17, the Wolverine, killing and injuring passengers on the second No. 17. The second No. 17 was en route from New York to Chicago, and No. 11 en route from New York to St. Louis.

Both trains involved were made up of all steel cars of the most modern type. At the point of accident the four-track line is equipped with automatic block signals of the latest and most approved kind.

As soon as the accident was reported a special relief train with every doctor available was sent from Batavia to the scene and the injured passengers were removed to the hospital at Batavia.

The automatic signals were working properly after the accident and the flagman of Train No. 17 states that a red fusee which he had placed on the track was burning when No. 11 passed him and ran over the fusee and ran into No. 17. A rigid investigation is being made.

A supplementary statement issued by Mr. Crowley follows:

At this hour twelve bodies have been found, and it is not known just how many more may be dead.

The engineer on Train No. 11 states that he did not see the automatic signals at danger, but that they were clear when he passed. However, he admits that the signals were set at danger when he went back after the accident to look at them. He also states that he did not see the flagman of No. 17.

The fireman on a freight engine which stood on an adjacent track says he saw the flagman of No. 17 go back and also saw him signal No. 11 to stop by swinging his red lantern.

The towerman, who had a view of the scene, also testifies that he saw the flagman of No. 17 signaling No. 11 to stop by swinging his red lantern and setting the red fusee burning. The towerman likewise testifies that the automatic block signals were at danger and set against No. 11.

The engineer on No. 11 had a clear view for a distance of two miles, and it was a cold, clear night. The rear red lights on No. 17 were both burning brightly, and the engineer of No. 11 is unable to give any reason why he did not see these marker lamps. He claims he was wide awake, but also is unable to say why he did not see the flagman of No. 17 signaling him to stop, or the burning fusee. Train 11, striking the rear coaches of No. 17, drove the last coach under the next to the last. Therefore, all of the deaths were in the last two coaches.

Early in the afternoon Mr. Crowley announced the total number of dead was twenty-one. The total number of injured was given as fifteen. Three tracks were blocked by the wreckage. They were cleared and in service at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

TELLS OF WRECK RESCUES.

Railroad Man Says Women Jumped from Car Into Blankets.

The second section of the Wolverine which was rammed near Batavia, N. Y., yesterday, carried 125 passengers, it was said at the New York Central offices here. Of this number 89 reported no injuries, 15 reported injured, and 21 were killed. The shearing of the steel sides of the telescoped cars, it was explained, so badly mangled many bodies as to make identification difficult.

Martin J. Alger, Executive Assistant to Regional Director Smith, who was on his way to Detroit, was one of the passengers of the Wolverine. He returned to this city yesterday afternoon. Mr. Alger was in the second car from the end and following the crash both he and his wife, who accompanied him managed to get out of the telescoping car by climbing down a ladder which was finally got into place.

"When the crash came," Mr. Alger said, "our car was shot high into the air, resting on the end car. It was pitch dark and bitter cold and it was with the utmost difficulty that we managed to find our clothes. One end of the car was twenty feet from the ground, and exit by the other end was barred by wreckage. With the aid of matches we got together what belongings we could find and then made for the only means of egress. At first the women were persuaded to leap into blankets held by men below. This plan was abandoned as soon as a ladder was brought. Because of the cold it was necessary to build large bonfires along the track."

Mrs. Rose Lichterman, who was seriously injured, is the daughter of L. H. Gels of this city. With her husband she had been visiting Mr. Gels at the Hotel Endicott, Columbus Avenue and Eighty-first Street. Nathan Lichterman is a coal dealer in Chicago.

Thomas B. Cumming, whose body was identified, was going to Grand Rapids on business for the firm of Meyer Sniffen & Co., of which he was General Manager. All day yesterday members of his family were in communication with the offices of the railroad. It is thought that the identification was made through Mr. Cumming's watch charm, which was a little gold football. The firm with which he was connected are dealers and makers of plumbing fixtures at 11 West Thirty-sixth Street.

Following are the names of residents of New York or its vicinity who were on the Wolverine and who reported no injuries, or injuries so slight that they were able to proceed on their journey: Augusta L. Bently, Robert Davis, Lillian Forsyth, J. D. Gillie, Mrs. R. S. Lill, W. S. Jones, E. Curtis Karter, Leo E. Loring, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Leeds, P. Lorillard, H. Naughton, H. Ribhaw, Augusta Skolberg, George E. Mack, B. L. Muller, C. D. Mourse, F. Nelson, E. Vanderberg, Ethel Reibold, R. G. Ward, Mrs. Pingo, Hoboken; A. D. Silliman, East Orange, N. J., and Don McKenzie, Greenwich, Conn. These names were obtained from the ticket office registry.

15 Reasons

Why First Mortgages Guaranteed by this Company Are the Best Investment for Prudent People.

10.

It is said that mortgages sometimes have to be foreclosed and the property bought in. This is true, but the guaranteed mortgagee never has to do this. The Company buys it, if necessary, and pays him his money.

In the past five years the Company has had to bring 1889 foreclosure suits but the mortgagees have not worried. The Company has bought in $4,562,000 of property but it has sold $3,697,000 of it at a loss of $333,000 and has $864,000 on hand now, after going through the worst period ever experienced.

It has done this without strain, has paid dividends to its stockholders regularly and has added to surplus $1,122,000, considerably more than the total amount of the foreclosed real estate now owned.

No investor has ever lost a dollar.

WORKERS GO BACK TO HARBOR BOATS

Commercial and Passenger Traffic Again on Nearly a Normal Basis.

SEND REPLY TO WILSON

CONFERENCE BEGINS TODAY

Employers Will Be Represented at Hearing—Municipal Ferryboats All Resume Operation.

While tugs and lighters were busy all day yesterday clearing up the freight that had accumulated in piers and warehouses in this port during the three days that the 16,000 marine workers were out in an attempt to force their demands for higher wages and shorter hours, Government officials, officials of the six unions in the Marine Workers' Affiliation, and the members of the New York Tug Boat Owners' Association were reconsidering and yielding many of the points that previously had prevented settlement of the strike.

Union officials and towboat owners agreed that the response of the men to the appeal of the War Labor Board to return to their work immediately pending reopening of the case at hearings in the City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning had been so general that commercial and passenger traffic in the harbor was practically normal for Sunday. Regular passenger ferry schedules to New Jersey, Staten Island, and Brooklyn on both private and municipal boats were resumed, and it was said that every ferry, lighter, and tug that was laid up at the beginning of the strike at 6 o'clock on Thursday morning would be running today.

Joseph Moran of the New York Towboat Exchange, and a member of the owners' association, issued a statement last night saying that the owners would be represented at the meeting of the National War Labor Board this morning, but protesting again against any decision by a board of which Basil M. Manly, Joint Chairman, was a member. His statement follows:

The boat owners will attend the hearing before the National War Labor Board on Monday morning. On Jan. 8 Joint Chairman Manly and W. H. Johnston, Fred Hewitt, Matthew Woll, John J. Manning, T. A. Rickert, and T. M. Guerin, members of the National War Labor Board, issued a signed statement in which they said that the boat owners had "constantly violated" previous awards, and that they had "contemptuously refused to comply with orders of the National War Labor Board." It is, of course, very plain that these gentlemen have, by such utterances, disabled themselves from taking any part in the hearing by or deliberations of the board. The basis of every hearing is that the arbiter shall approach the matter with an unbiased and open mind. Upon assumption that these gentlemen will not sit, we shall attend before the board and receive with the utmost respect any suggestions it may decide to offer.

Neither Paul Bonynge, counsel for the boat owners, nor members of the tow boat associations would say last night what course they would take before the board this morning in protesting against the membership of Joint Chairman Manly, who was appointed as a labor representative by President Wilson upon the resignation of Joint Chairman Frank J. Walsh. William H. Taft, Joint Chairman, representing capital on the War Labor Board, and other members of the board who arrived here last night had no preliminary comment to make on the reopening of the case.

Send Dispatch to President.

After notifying the 16,000 members of the Marine Workers' Affiliation to return to their boats at once and stay at work until a decision had been made by the Labor Board the officers of the six unions sent a cable dispatch to President Wilson assuring him of their support and asserting their determination to "submit their cause absolutely to the War Labor Board." The message also was signed by representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association and the Port and Terminal Workers' Association, two organizations supporting the demands of the marine workers. The dispatch reads:

Complying with your cabled request, transmitted by Joint Chairmen Taft and Manly, the striking marine workers of New York Harbor have returned to work, and submit their cause absolutely to the National War Labor Board, which you have declared to be the instrumentality set up by our Government to settle such controversies.

Our only demands are for a living wage and an eight-hour day, both of which have been proclaimed by you to be the inherent right of every worker in the nation. We do this ungrudgingly, with the sincere hope that you may be undisturbed in mind and spirit in the splendid work of leading in the creation of a new birth of freedom for all the peoples of the earth, and proving, if need be, that the toilers of your own land are supporting you enthusiastically and to a man.

The message was signed by Captain William A. Maher of the American Association of Masters, Mates and Pilots, Thomas L. Delahunty of the Marine Engineers, Paul A. Vacarelli of the Harbor Boatmen's Union, John Brennan of the Tidewater Boatmen's Union, Stephen J. Condon of the Lighter Captains' Union, Alfred M. Sarrell of the Hoisting Engineers' Union, Joseph P. Stanton of the Port and Terminal Workers' Union, and T. V. O'Connor of the International Longshoremen's Union.

Longshoremen's Strike Unauthorized.

At a meeting of the Longshoremen's Union yesterday at 164 Eleventh Avenue President O'Connor criticised members of the union who had refused to work because they thought they would be helping the cause of marine workers. He said the strikes of longshoremen had not been authorized by the union officials, and he urged the men not to go out again without approval of their union officers, no matter how strong were their sympathies with other unions on strike. At the meeting the officers were authorized to aid in the presentation of the case of the marine workers before the War Labor Board and to sign the message to the President.

Opposition to the decision of the Strike Committee of the Marine Workers' Affiliation to return to work pending decision by the War Board was expressed yesterday at an informal meeting of members of the unions at the headquarters at 26 Park Place by James Moran, Assistant Business Manager of the affiliation. He said President Delahunty of the affiliation held the same opinion, but several other union members pointed out that the call to return to work was signed by the Presidents of the six unions and that they intended to respond to the request of the War Labor Board to return to work.

President Delahunty of the affiliation and Stephen J. Condon of the Lighter Captains' Union asserted last night that Moran had no authority whatever to urge the men not to work. They repeated orders to the 16,000 marine workers to have every boat in the harbor running before the War Labor Board met this morning.

Although the original order to the strikers to return to work exempted those who were employed on the Lackawanna ferries because Captain J. M. Emery, Marine Superintendent for the railroad, had kept nine boats running with men not in sympathy with the strike, no effort was made yesterday by the union officers to enforce that part of the order. It was threatened also that the unions would demand that the men who kept the Lackawanna ferryboats running throughout the strike be discharged by the railroad company, but the union officials advised that all these questions be left without decision until a ruling had been made by the War Labor Board.

Ferryboats of the municipal lines to Staten Island and Brooklyn were running yesterday with their crews of union workers, and the police from the Marine Division were withdrawn. John H. Delaney, Commissioner of Plant and Structure, said the charges against the ninety-one municipal ferrymen who quit work would not be dismissed, although District Attorney Swann, who had issued subpoenas for all the men to appear at his office today, said the men might disregard their subpoenas if they had resumed their work.

FILM SHOWS FRENCH ENTRY INTO ALSACE

France-America Society Guests at Showing of Official Pictures.

ASSAILS CRITICS OF FRANCE

Dr. Butler Explains Policy on League of Nations and Peace Settlement.

A private and the first showing of French official films depicting the triumphal entry of the French, American, and British troops into the cities of Alsace-Lorraine was held last night in the Hotel Plaza by the French High Commission for the members of the France-America Society, Inc. The speakers were Marcel Knecht of the High Commission and Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University and of the France-America Society, the latter of whom defended France's peace aims and denied that she sought territorial extension.

The pictures, which were taken by the Cinematographic Division of the French Army, were divided into two groups, the first showing the entry of the conquering French into Lorraine, the second presenting the evenly swinging columns of sturdy poilus tramping staunchly through the streets of Alsatian cities. The first flash on the screen showed the streets of Diouze empty. A click and the streets were packed with a jubilant throng and through a lane came the French Foreign Legion—flapping coats, rapier-like bayonets, short, snappy step, in line after line, wave after wave, through the streets that had been German-controlled since 1870. As the veterans marched past, as the flower-bedecked 75s trundled along, the enthusiasm and the joy of liberated Lorraine were unbounded, the troops passing between lines that cheered without halt and under a shower of flowers from balconies, windows, and housetops. Once the soldiers halted and in the forefront of the picture stood a tall French Sergeant holding the Tri-Color. There was a movement in the crowd, two gendarmes were upset—their glistening helmets rolling out for a "close up"—and women and men rushed out to kiss the colors—one woman holding a child up to kiss the Sergeant.

With Marshal Pétain, astride a white horse, riding ahead, the columns strode proudly through the cities of Phalsbourg, Sarrebourg, and then shifting to Alsace, where Generals Hirschauer, de Castelnau, and Gouraud wheeled into the picture beside Pétain, down to Metz, the once great German stronghold. There in the shadow of the statue of Marshal Ney, Pétain, immobile, except when he snapped to salute as the colors went past, reviewed his hosts. The pictures at Metz disclosed that the French marched back to Alsace and Lorraine with the Stars and Stripes entwined with the Tricolor on gunstock and cannon.

Exposes Enemy Propaganda.

In his speech Dr. Butler said:

"There are not wanting signs that, despite the armistice, the insidious enemy propaganda is not ended. Whisperings are heard and often repeated that the free peoples and their Governments are at odds with themselves and with each other, and that despite professions of high purposes some cling to selfish policies of aggrandizement and imperialistic ambition. It cannot be too often or too emphatically said that there is absolutely no ground for these suspicions or whisperings, and that they represent the work of trouble makers at a time when men are earnestly taking counsel how best to put this sort of trouble behind them forever. The Government of Great Britain speaks for the people of Great Britain with an authority and a mandate just now confirmed by the British people. M. Clemenceau and his fellow Ministers have just appealed to the Chamber of Deputies for support, and have received it by an overwhelming majority. These are the Governments and these are the peoples who have borne for four long years the brunt of the war and its suffering, and it is to them that the world looks for constructive leadership in the fashioning of permanent peace, which cause America is only too eager to serve with undivided loyalty. There is no difference between these peoples and their Governments; they stand together as a unit in the support of great and far-reaching policies of progress.

"The troublemakers insituate that France wishes to annex Asia Minor. France wishes nothing of the sort and could not be induced to annex Asia Minor. The Syrian Christians, who occupy a portion of Asia Minor, in the exercise of their own right of self-determination, are asking that the protection of France be given to an autonomous government of their own. If the new Society of Nations should heed this petition and assign to France the honor and responsibility of affording protection and guidancen to an autonomous Syria while on its way to a future independence, who could have anything but praise for so farsighted a policy?

"The trouble makers insinuate again that France, not satisfied with the return of Alsace-Lorraine, is asking for the annexation of all German territory on the left bank of the Rhine. France is asking for nothing of the sort and could not be induced to attempt to extend its sovereignty over the German population in that area. France is far too wise to set up in Europe another Alsace-Lorraine. But, on the other hand, France has no intention, after its forty-four years of living under threats and its four years of livink in agonized torment, of permitting the territory on the left bank of the Rhine to be made the recruiting ground and the storehouse for another and later attempt at the destruction of its national life. France will demand, and properly demand, with, I trust, the full support of the United States, that the territory on te left bank of the Rhine, while remaining German, be by international agreement sterilized so far as preparation for future wars is concerned.

atVu—gla shrdlu cmfwyp cmfwyp emf

"The trouble makers insinuate further that France will be found to be an obstacle to a League of Nations. What nonsense? At the two Hague conferences of 1899 and 1907 France, represented by MM. Leon Bourgeois, d'Estournelles de Constant, and Leon Renault, was foremost in supporting every well-conceived plan for an International Court of Justice and for a better organized world. The most definite and precise outline of a plan for a League of Nations that is easily within the bounds of practical statesmanship has been presented by MM. Leon Bourgeois and d'Estournelles de Constant on behalf of the French Society of Nations and placed by M. Clemenceau at the very head of the list of subjects to be presented and discussed by the French delegates at the Peace Conference."

AMERICANS' PAY IN FRANCS.

Troops in Occupied Zone No Longer Will Get Marks.

NANCY, France, Jan. 12, (Associated Press.)—By a new order issued at General Headquarters, the troops within the occupied zone hersafter are to be paid in francs instead of marks. Under the present arrangement money in marks is brought to Coblenz from Berlin by Germans and turned over to the chief disbursing officer.

The payroll of the Third Army amounts to approximately 26,000,000 francs a month.

Money to the amount of 15,000,000 marks arrived in Coblenz Saturday from Berlin, this amount completing the January assessment against the Germans. A total of 79,000,000 marks has been received from Berlin toward paying the expenses of the occupying forces. The exchange rate now is 149 marks for 100 francs.

AIRSHIP AT HAMPTON ROADS

Navy Dirigible Covers First Leg of Journey in Seven Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 12.—The navy's dirigible balloon C-1, which left Rockaway Beach, N. Y., this morning, made the trip to Hampton Roads in exactly seven hours. The voyage down the coast, across New Jersey and Eastern Maryland to Washington and Virginia was made without mishap.

Thousands of sightseers at Old Point Comfort and Willoughby Beach witnessed the arrival of the big airship and its descent on the aviation field. Many were out early for the sight and remained several hours before the big gas bag put in appearance over Chesapeake Bay.

"The flight was successful and without a marring incident, if the cold weather is overlooked," said Captain S. V. Parker. The six men with him were in excellent condition. They expect to resume the flight to Key West tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The navy dirigible C-1, en route from Rockaway Beach, N. Y., for Key West, Fla., passed over Washington early this afternoon, circling over the White House and Navy Department.

TO DO HONOR TO ITALY.

Italy-America Society Will Give Pageant at Opera House.

As an expression of appreciation of the part which Italy played in winning the war, a gala celebration and pageant is announced by the Italy-America Society to take place at the Metropolitan Opera House on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 26.

It is declared by the society, of which Charles E. Hughes is President, that "an American tribute to Italy" should be rendered not only as evidence of the increasing importance of Italian-American relations, but also as recognition of the fact that "more miles of Italian front were actually protected by the Italians almost single handed against the Austro-Hungarian armies than there were in the western front and the Serbian front combined." Fitting tribute, it is also said, should be rendered to the work of the Italian Navy during the war.

Mr. Hughes will preside at this celebration, and Secretary Daniels of the Navy, has accepted an invitation to tell the real story of the naval forces of Italy. Italians who saw service at the front will also speak.

Officers of the Italy-America Society, with quarters at 165 Broadway, are, beside Justice Hughes, the President: The Italian Ambassador, Count Macchi Di Cellere, Honorary President; Major Lloyd C. Griscom, Vice President; Thoma W. Lamont, Treasurer, and Theodore Rousseau, Secretary. William Fellowes Morgan is Chairman of the Executive Committee, which includes, in addition to the foregoing officers, Richard Washburn Child and George F. Baker, Jr. On the Committee of Arrangements for the mass meeting, of which Robert Underwood Johnson is Chairman, are William Guggenheim, Francis Hartman Markoe, Douglas L. Dunbar, and John Foster Carr.

TELLS OF ITALY'S DESIRES

Capt. Tozzi, at Colony Club, Outlines His Country's Case.

At a meeting in the Colony Club yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the American Committee in Aid of Italian Soldiers Crippled in the War, several Italian officers spoke of Italy's participation in the war, and Captain Pietro Tozzi of the Italian Mission told something of Italy's case at the coming Peace Conference.

"At the outset Italy asked nothing in return for entering the war," Captain Tozzi said, "and now all she asks is that Italians living in the conquered territory should be brought back into the fold. I will state it as my belief that where the Italian flag has been planted in the Trentino and east coast of the Adriatic it will not come down. And Italy is counting upon the United States to support its claims."

Others who made addresses were Captain Alessandro Sapelli, Lieutenant Bruno Roselli, Professor Giovanni Lorenzoni, and Captain Degli Alpini. Countess Macchi di Cellere, wife of the Italian Ambassador, is honorary Chairman of the committee; Mrs. Henry J. Burchell, Chairman; Mrs. Enrico Caruso, Secretary, and Alessandro Oldrini, Treasurer.

SMITH ANSWERS DANIELS.

Mayor Says Philadelphia Vice Will Be Handled as Before.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—Mayor Smith tonight made public his reply to Secretary Daniels in their controversy over the vice situation in this city, which is, in part, as follows:

"I am satisfied that the complaints you have recently received concerning general conditions in Philadelphia are without foundation.

"You may rest assured the activities of the civil authorities here with regard to the suppression of vice will continue unabated. Both myself and the Director of Public Safety have too high a regard for this city, in which we were born and have lived all of our lives, to permit the conditions to which you refer to exist here or to allow unfair and unjust imputations upon its fair name to go unchallenged.

"As it has been your custom to give communications of this character addressed to me to the public press for publication in advance, I have taken the same liberty with this."

To reporters the Mayor said:

"I want to say that we will continue to handle the matter our own way, even while we admit the right of Mr. Daniels to inquire into conditions in any city. But you may make it as strong as you wish that Superintendent Robinson will remain at the head of the Police Department and that Captain Mills will have absolute charge of vice. That is definite and final."

until he had learned all the facts. If the investigation shows beyond doubt that the women's life had been assailed previously by Lobaudy and that she was forced to shoot finally in self-defense, it is possible that no great effort will be made to bring her to trial. District Attorney Weeks said today that, as far as he was able to judge at present, he considered it was a matter on which a jury should pass. He said that he would begin placing the evidence before the Grand Jury tomorrow.

If the theory of self-defense can be strongly supported, the chance that the woman may be freed without a trial is not remote. After the Carman and de Saulles cases the Nassau County authorities are not anxious to have the Mineola Court House the scene of another celebrated case, whose issue might give the impression that the law was loosely administered in the county where women were concerned. According to Constable O'Connor of Westbury, who was at "The Lodge" shortly after the shooting, Mrs. Lebaudy said:

"Yes, I shot him. He deserved it. But I will go free. Look at Mrs. Carman and Mrs. de Saulles."

Denied His Marriage.

Jaeques Lebaudy had, in some of his previous difficulties with Mrs. Lebaudy, denied that she was his legal wife, and Edwin T. Murdoch, formerly a lawyer for Lebaudy, issued a statement yesterday reviving this charge and asserting also that Lebaudy, though eccentric, was perfectly sound in mind and a clever business man. Mr. Moore, the lawyer for Mrs. Lebaudy, said on this subject:

"I have absolute proof that Lebaudy introduced her as Mrs. Lebaudy and had done so for many years. There is no question but that she occupies the position of a wife."

District Attorney Weeks said that he was not interested in this question and considered that the position which Mrs. Lebaudy had occupied for years was enough in itself to prevent any question from being raised legally as to the status of the couple. Mrs. Lebaudy, whose name was originally Marie Augustine Da Loch Delliere, has been with Lebaudy for nearly twenty years. When he conferred on himself the title of "Emperor of Sahara," he shared his imperial nomenclature with her, and she lived in a blaze of publicity at the old Hotel Savoy in London as "The Empress of Sahara."

At this time Lebaudy surrounded himself with veterans of 1870, of the American civil war, of the Boer war, and of Balkan conflicts, and made up his filibustering party with which he intended to carve out of Northern Africa a sandy empire to be known as "Lebaudia." Up to the time that this sand-lot expedition failed, Mrs. Lebaudy was known in London, more or less satirically, as "Empress Augustine."

Her Dog Got Lost.

Some of Lebaudy's lieutenants held her responsible for the disaster to Lebaudy's plans, according to the London press at the time, charging that, when the invading party was about to embark in secret for Africa, Mrs. Lebaudy sent a peremptory summons for the return of the main force to hunt for her dog Fi-Fi, which had got lost.

The question raised by Mr. Murdoch may have some bearing on the disposition of Lebaudy's estate. He said that he had cabled to Lebaudy's relatives in France to protect their interests. He refused to state who the relatives were. The woman cook at "The Lodge," who was questioned by the District Attorney, said that early Saturday night Lebaudy burst through the kitchen with a gallon can of kerosene. When she looked at him in surprise, he said:

"Well, what are you staring at?"

The cook said that the little girl Jacqueline came running downstairs after the shooting and exclaimed:

"What was that noise, mother?"

"Don't worry, dear. Just go back to your room," the mother replied, according to the cook. Later Jacqueline was told by her mother, or found out for herself, what had happened, because it was she who telephoned to Mr. Moore, the lawyer.

The estate left by Lebaudy will run into the millions, it was stated on good authority, although it will be considerably less than that which was left him by his father, Max Lebaudy, a wealthy French sugar refiner. A man in a position to know Lebaudy's affairs very well said last night:

"I believe the value of his estate will be found to be two or three millions, although his income was low in comparison with the size of his estate. Some of his curious freaks were of benefit to him in one way, because they made it possible to protect his estate in spite of his eccentricities. One of his notions was that everybody was trying to cheat him, and if he had not possessed that notion, it is very probable that he would have been cheated out of his estate long ago by adventurers who might take advantage of him while he was unbalanced.

Flooded His Mines.

"He bought several rich mines, but he was so much afraid that they would be mismanaged and the profits stolen that he closed them down entirely. In some cases he even had them flooded to keep rich ore from being carted off. He made a practice of buying non-dividend-paying stocks, as in his well-known coup in Erie. Consequently, much of his property will be found to have a great future value, although not revenue producing. He owned several Suez Canal shares, and he had a considerable sum on deposit in London banks, on which he drew interest.

"It may seem strange, in view of his many queer outbreaks, but Lebaudy was uncommonly economical, even miserly. He wore his clothes until they were quite shabby. He haggled over the prices of food and spent as little as possible.

"He owned The Lodge and the estate surrounding it, reported to be worth about $150,000. His wife had no means of her own, and all the bills that were paid were paid by him. He had on one occasion at least refused to pay them, claiming that Mrs. Lebaudy was not his wife, but when he was more or less in his right mind he gave her money to run the estate. They had been separated most of the time for years, but he had been going to The Lodge frequently of late, threatening her life and even attempting it. He had also menaced his daughter.

"Mrs. Lebaudy had sought previously to have him restrained, but the man had a streak of cunning that, no matter how weird his antics may have been, he could usually convince a court and examining physicians that he was sane. When he appeared in court in any of his numerous lawsuits he made an impressive witness. He never let any queerness break out of him, and he would make people regard him not only as a sane man but as an exceptionally wise and able one.

"Mrs. Lebaudy has no resources beyond what, if anything, she may receive from Lebaudy's estate."

Although the big house was richly and even magnificently furnished, its condition and that of the estate was somewhat neglected. There was little food in the house, according to the officials, when they made a search of the place today. It was learned that several of the storekeepers in the town had bills long overdue and that some had refused to furnish supplies to the house until their accounts were settled. Summonses for Mrs. Lebaudy had been issued in suits to compel payment of some small bills. From neighbors the authorities learned that Jacqueline had been withdrawn recently from the Brentwood Academy conducted by the Sisters of St. Joseph because her mother could not pay further tuition there.

Mrs. Lebaudy is in such a physical condition that she will not be arraigned for several days. Her daughter was constantly with her today.

UNION LEADERS FEAR REMOVAL OF HARRIS

Oppose Copeland's Action in Division of Industrial Hygiene.

PLAN AN ACTIVE PROTEST

Labor Convention Names Delegation to Wait on Copeland Today.

Labor leaders declared yesterday that they would fight the action of Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland in removing the work of the Division of Industrial Hygiene from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, of which Dr. Louis I. Harris is Chairman. Announcement was made that representatives of organized labor would immediately ask the co-operation of the social and civic bodies of the city in seeking to prevail on the Health Commissioner that to carry out his expressed intention would be to the disadvantage of the public and of the workers of the city. It was said that several civic bodies would meet today to take action in the matter.

At noon today, it was announced last night, the following labor delegation will call on Dr. Copeland to discuss the situation: Max Pine and Meyer Abramson of the United Hebrew Trades, Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union; Rose Schneiderman and Maude Swartz of the Women's Trade Union League, Fred Gaa of the Painters' Union, Edward C. Rybicki of Typographical Union No. 6, and John Coughlin of the Central Labor Union of Brooklyn.

Representatives of organized labor took issue yesterday on all the points raised by Dr. Copeland in his statement concerning the reason for the change in the Bureau of Preventable Diseases.

"I desire to take exception to the Commissioner's statement that this is new work," said Mr. Rybicki. "In 1915 I collaborated with Dr. Harris, who was then in charge of the Division of Industrial Hygiene, in the preparation of a placard on precautions for printers.

"The work of industrial hygiene and such a division existed then, as a glance at the records of Dr. Copeland's department will show. Labor most vehemently condemns the action of the Health Commissioner in the unscrupulous way in which he has dealt with the Division of Industrial Hygiene by taking it over into his own office, and placing it in charge of a man who has never had experience in the work.

"In what Dr. Copeland is trying to do," said Miss Schneiderman, "he is bound either to take away the powers of Dr. Harris or to duplicate them. If the latter, then it will be an easy matter to abolish Dr. Harris and his bureau in the near future. The Commissioner promised that before he made any changes of interest to organized labor he would consult labor, and he has not done so in this matter."

The following resolution was passed yesterday at the convention of the Greater New York Labor Party at Yorkville Casino:

"Whereas, Health Commissioner Copeland has by executive order taken the Division of Industrial Hygiene from the Bureau of Preventive Diseases, and whereas Dr. Louis I. Harris has for four years ably and efficiently carried on the work and has become an established authority regarding the health of workers, therefore, be it resolved,

"That the Greater New York Labor Party respectfully and earnestly protests to Commissioner Copeland against disturbing this branch of the department, because it constitutes a danger to the community. The members of the Greater New York Labor Party will exert every effort to prevent this unfortunate interference with an official who has now the confidence of those interested in the health of the workers."

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Among the best talking machines we know is the "Widdicomb," a musical instrument as far above the old fashioned squawk producer as ecstasy is from torture. Its tone is a delight, for the "Widdicomb" combines three elements essential to perfect sound reproduction, a strong, smooth running motor, a clear mica reproducer and a properly constructed tone chamber.

Needle noises, vibrations and blast are practically eliminated by the tonal perfection of this instrument.

In keeping with such superior mechanism are the graceful cabinets or console cases which in themselves add to the beauty of a room. You may select from Queen Anne, Sheraton, Chippendale or Adam periods. A most popular model is the early American Console at $154.00.

MILLIONS FOR WAR CHARITIES STOLEN

Swann's Report Tells How the Patriotic Were Imposed Upon by Numerous "Funds."

HIGH COMMISSIONS PAID

"Social Climbers" Who Expected Recognition Used In Frauds—Much Money Wasted.

A report of District Attorney Swann's investigation of war charities was made public yesterday, with recommendations for Federal supervision and control of all patriotic societies and organizations engaged in national and international relief work, and for a Government investigation of the work of war relief charities abroad to which American money was donated. The investigation, he announced, was the means of recovering $250,000 for reputable charity.

Remedial legislation of this character is necessary, he asserts, because the penal laws are applicable only to misappropriation of funds and the obtaining of money by false pretenses, and further, because the efforts of prosecutors and grand juries to meet the situation are rendered nugatory by the lack of any law requiring the registration of those engaged in war activities and the keeping and verification of accounts showing the amounts collected and disbursed.

"The propriety of remedial legislation could not be more apparent, nor has the necessity therefor been lessened by the cessation of hostilities," says Mr. Swann. "The task before us of contributing to the care of the wounded soldier and his dependents and to the families of those who lost their lives in the service, and even the families of those who fought and returned, will, after their death, present a never-ending appeal to the sympathies and appreciation of the public with the everlasting memory of their services in the great world war. And so long as the shell-shattered peasant homes of Europe remain unrebuilded and other work of devastation be unrestored war relief activities will not end."

Found Millions Stolen.

The District Attorney and his aids find that millions of dollars donated for the benefit of soldiers and sailors and other contributory war relief were stolen and that waste and loss were occasioned in some organizations by the ambitions of "social climbers." The Grand Jury indicted twenty-six alleged offenders, a number of whom were convicted.

Assistant District Attorney Edwin P. Kilroe, who conducted the war charities investigations covering some fourteen months and prepared the report, states that the National Council of Defense estimated that the American people had contributed between three and four billions of dollars for relief work since the beginning of the war, approximately 60 per cent. of which was raised in New York.

Of the social aspects of war charity activities, he says:

"Of especial interest was the revelation of the character and prominence of the patrons of the various individual activities and the gullible or careless case with which persons of prominence lent their names, in many instances without either judgment or investigation, to activities conceived and promoted often by ex-convicts, confidence men, adventurers, and social parasites.

"This form of activity was hit upon at once by 'climbers' who saw an opportunity for social recognition and preferment in the advertisement and popular approval that would follow from their ostentatious philanthropy and patriotism. Many people of this type possessed of considerable fortunes, and therefore without venal motive, but wholly devoid of experience or adaptability for the form of work undertaken saw in the field a prospect of Governmental recognition, commendation, or even official honor or decorations.

"In many instances it was discovered that the names of persons of unimpeachable character and integrity were exploited for selfish purposes, wholly without their consent or even knowledge; but by far the greater vice lay in the use of the names of prominent and worthy persons as directors, committee members, and patrons, whose approval and consent were actually given without sufficient, and in many cases with no investigations as to the character of those who managed the activity and handled and disbursed the funds. Thus recommended to the public confidence, and unrestrained either by check of conscience, the swindler and the profiteer proceeded to gorge themselves from the outpourings of the general public purse.

High Percentages Paid.

"Worthy committees, under the plea of necessity and in their eagerness to obtain returns for laudable objects, were induced to enter into unconscionable contracts with solicitors, whose percentages ranged from 40 per cent to 85 per cent., and to undertake without judgment or foresight the expenditures of vast sums of money for overhead expenses, advertising and other forms of exploitation. Ambitious public functions, with the glamour of social, patriotic and philanthropic dedication, were organized and undertaken by the well-meaning dilettanti. Large attendances were secured and considerable sums devoted in support by the unwary; and after the tinsel and the glamour were brushed aside, an accounting had, and obligations paid, a mere pittance remained for the benefit of the war sufferer."

The District Attorney asserts that deliberate theft robbed the war relief chests of more than $3,000,000 in the twelve months prior to the starting of his investigation and says the wastage in other ways amounted to 65 per cent. of the moneys collected.

Mr. Kilroe reports investigations made of 534 organizations of all kinds and examinations made of 1,583 witnesses. He divides his work under the heading of "one hundred per cent. boys, the waster type of charity, profiteering, foolish charities, miscellaneous frauds, patriotic societies, and frauds abroad," and says he found that "the field of war relief work in the United States presented a vast jungle of forms and fancies as various as the human imagination might suggest."

"Waster" Charities Listed

The report contains a long list of charities under the various heads which were put out of business by criminal action or were induced to suspend when it was shown their work could better be done and at less expense through other organizations.

Two notable examples of the waster type of charity enumerated by Mr. Kilroe are the Army and Navy Bazaar and the American Ambulance in Russia. Among minor examples of the waster type are the Holland-American Home for Belgian Widows and Orphans, promoted by Miss Henrika A. C. van der Flier, and the French Restoration Fund, promoted by Countess Sartoris, wife of a grandson of General U. S. Grant. The work of Miss van der Flier and Countess Sartoris, also known as Mrs. Cecile Sartoris, was discontinued by request when this country entered the war. Among others who were also requested to cease their activities here, Mr. Kilroe announced, were "Countess" Chic Mazzuchi, (the "Angel of the Marne");) "Countess" Laura de Gozdawa Turczynowicz Seumas, Chief of Clann Fhearguis of Stra-chur and Clann Alpein Argyle, Scotland, and Waldemar de Bills, manager of charity bazaars and entertainments.

TURN TO LONGWORTH IN SPEAKERSHIP FIGHT

Ohio Member Put Forward as Compromise Candidate by Foes of Mann and Gillett.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Representative Longworth of Ohio has come to the front as the compromise candidate for Speaker of the House. Delegations from the Middle Western States, representing the Republican accessions by the last election, which gave control to the Republican party, are strongly opposed to either Representative Mann or Representative Gillett for Speaker. Members of Congress from these States and, indeed, some members from Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania, are now saying that the election of Mann or Gillett would not satisfy the sentiment that must be depended upon to elect a Republican President, and a Republican Congress in 1920.

Upon such a platform Representative S. D. Fess of Ohio was early brought out by some independent Republicans, when Mr. Longworth declined to be considered as a candidate for the Speakership. Mr. Fess, however, injured his chance by issuing a statement, advising the Republicans to proceed slowly and "take heed to the signals of the times." The statement, his friends said, was a tactical error and lost him ground. With this development the independents and those who might be classed as progressives began to become assertive in their demand for the defeat of the two avowed candidates.

It was generally conceded that Mr. Longworth was one of the strongest of the younger members of the House to oppose the Old Guard. But whether Mr. Longworth admitted it or not, when approached by his boomers, it is known that he acted upon the belief that Colonel Roosevelt would be the Republican nominee in 1920, and that it would not be wise for the Colonel's son-in-law to seek the Speakership. His friends and well wishers recognized the force of such an argument. In the last few days, however, with politics brought to the fore more prominently than in months, the independents are talking of making an alliance to defeat Representative Mann, who, it is conceded, has the lead in the race up to this time.

It was reported today that the followers of Gillett would turn their strength to Longworth after the first ballot in the caucus. Mr. Longworth has the Ohio delegation. He would command most of the votes from Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, and California, and it is known that the younger members of Congress from New York and Pennsylvania are favorable to him.

WOOD FOR CHICAGO POST.

Will Succeed Barry There if He Desires the Command.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Major General Thomas H. Barry, commander of the Central Department of the Army, with headquarters at Chicago, was ordered today to proceed immediately to New York to assume command of the Eastern Department, succeeding Major General J. Franklin Bell, who died several days ago.

General Barry's successor at Chicago has not yet been detailed, it was said today at the War Department. Major Gen. Leonard Wood, now commanding at Camp Funston, Kansas, has been selected for the post, but the orders will not be issued until he has decided whether he desires the appointment.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood, when informed by The Associated Press tonight that it was said at the War Department in Washington he had been selected to command the Central Department, said he did not wish to make any comment until he had received definite word from the War Department. Major Gen. Wood spoke here today at memorial exercises for Theodore Roosevelt.

INDEPENDENT LABOR TICKET

New Party in Chicago Nominates Candidates for City Offices.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—John Fitzpatrick, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, for Mayor; John Kikulski, Polish organizer of stock yards workmen, for City Clerk, and Knute G. Torkelson, a carpenter, for City Treasurer, were the candidates of the new Independent Labor Party, nominated today at a convention attended by about 400 delegates. All nominations were by acclamation, and were suggested by the Executive Committee of the party.

Miss Agnes Nestor, Chairman of a special committee to draft resolutions concerning returning soldiers and sailors, presented a report which, after reciting that "our fighting men are determined that the fight for freedom and justice, for which they sacrificed, shall prevail at home," pledged for the gathering to the soldiers and sailors "our help in securing for them more than mere jobs, more than temporary praise, but a vital share in the control, direction, and ownership in industry, business, and Government," and also declared for "a special committee of soldiers, sailors, and workmen" to be selected by this convention to deal with the problems of the returned soldiers and sailors, and to promote their cooperation with the workers of Chicago for the advancement of political and industrial democracy at home."

The resolutions were adopted unanimously after Miss Margaret Haley, in supporting them, said: "We haven't a Soldiers' and Workmen's Council yet, but isn't that what this is?"

LABOR HERE ADOPTS WILSON PEACE AIMS

Platform Calls for Radical Reforms in After-War Reconstruction.

DEMANDS FREEDOM FOR ALL

Favors Democratic Control of Industry and Commerce, and Minimum Wage.

A platform calling for national, social, industrial, and political reform was adopted yesterday at the second day's convention of the American Labor Party of New York, held at Yorkville Casino, 210 East Eighty-sixth Street. The peace aims of President Wilson were indorsed.

The platform demanded self-determination for Ireland, protested against "interference in the internal affairs of Russia or any other nation," urged the withdrawal of allied troops from Russia, and declared for a "League of Workers" to supplement the League of Nations, and whose purpose it would be to "destroy autocratic and economic imperialism throughout the world."

The establishment of an international labor standard was urged, to the end that an era of worldwide disarmament might be brought about. "Open diplomacy, no more Kings and no more militarism," was the way this part of the platform read.

"If we, the workers, are to enjoy freedom and emerge out of the suffering and sacrifice of the great world conflict now closed, it behooves labor to formulate its own program of fundamental social, economic, and political change and establish an independent American Labor Party to carry out that program," the preamble to the platform declared.

The platform as adopted, called for the following program:

"Restoration of the right of free speech, free assemblage, the immediate restoration of all fundamental political rights, free press, and free worship; the removal of all war-time restraints on the interchange of ideas and the movement of people among communities and nations, and the liberation of all persons held in prison or indicted under charges due to their championship of the rights of labor or their patriotic insistence upon the rights guaranteed to them by the Constitution."

Among the other reforms urged in the platform were that Federal agencies should undertake national projects during the period of reconstruction so that the soldiers, sailors, and war-work employes might not be without positions; that all adult workers should be guaranteed a minimum wage; that in all industries there should be established a democratic board of adjustment to establish a standard wage based on the average cost of supporting a family of five persons; the inauguration of a standard working week not exceeding forty-four hours, and a standard work day of eight hours; the establishment by law of the right of workers to organize with the recognition that the worker has a property right in his job; provision for the care of the workers by State insurance against accidents, disease, unemployment, and old age, and the continuation after the war of soldiers and sailors' insurance and the extension of such insurance by the Government.

Want Standard Factory Law.

The platform also called for the enforcement of a uniform standard of all factory laws, child labor laws, and laws protecting women. Under the provision of "democratic control of industry and commerce," the platform urged "the democratic control of industry and commerce by those who work with the hand and brain, and the elimination of autocratic domination of the forces of production, either by selfish, private interests, or bureaucratic agents of the Government."

In education the following program was favored; creation of a Department of Education, the head of which is to be a member of the Cabinet; the administration of local educational systems by elective and paid boards of education; college and university training free to all who qualify.

Unequivocal opposition to universal military training in time of peace and acquiescence in it only in time of war when approved by a referendum vote was stated in the plank on military training. Other reforms urged were equal pay for men and women for the same work, a tax of 100 per cent. on all incomes above $100,000; the use of revenue from a system of taxation on land values, and taxes to eliminate excessive inheritance.

Invited to express the attitude of the Socialists toward the convention, Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken said that the Socialists would be happy to co-operate with the Labor Party in the work of reconstruction, but as to the question of a merger of the two parties he said that the future would have to decide that question.

Justice Panken said it was a mistake to suppose that British labor had been defeated in the last election. "You may not know that 70 per cent. of British soldiers overseas refused to vote," he declared. "They marked on their ballots, 'Demobilization first, election next.' The British Labor Party in polling 2,700,000 votes won a signal victory. In a short time Parliament will be dissolved, a new election will be called, and labor will choose a Cabinet. What we propose here is to lay the ground for action of the workers against the exploiters.

"As far as I am concerned, if there is going to be any dictatorship at all, I would rather have a dictatorship of the proletariat than that of the bourgeoisie, but there cannot be a dictatorship of the proletariat here, only a democracy of the proletariat."

Telegrams were sent to Senator Hiram Johnson of California praising him for his endeavor to "interpret the Soviet Government to the people of the United States." Senator France of Maryland, in a resolution, was praised for his efforts to get the espionage law repealed.

ECONOMICS

long ago disproved the theory that "one man's loss is another's gain." One man's loss is everybody's loss—affecting directly and indirectly every individual with whom he comes in contact. And should the loss result from theft, there is the moral loss of the thief as well.

SILK PETTICOATS

for Southern wear and for the early Spring days

have made their appearance in many alluring forms.

Among the novelties that are sure to find favor are petticoats of silk jersey having bordures of printed chiffon; these are especially well adapted for wearing with the fashionable narrow skirt.

Then there are charmingly colorful effects in navy blue combined with Victory red—that warm, inspiring tone which is itself obtained by blending red with blue.

Several of the new models are originations from B. Altman & Co.'s own ateliers.

Defining Files

Files are a place where papers should be instantly found when anybody is through with them and anybody else—wants them.

Whether your files fit that definition depends on how you regard them. If you think of them as dead storage space you'll have dead files. If you regard them properly you'll want files that vitalize your office routine by giving impulse to records through proper channels.

Amberg Indexes properly applied to your individual problems will make your files an active force in your business. Amberg Indexes are based on proved laws of proportion in the filing of business names.

An Amberg Analysis
will advise you of the possibilities of making your filing plan a more energizing factor in your organization than you can conceive possible.

Amberg Cabinets, wood and steel, are standard—and the Indexes fit any make of cabinet.

SOLDIERS WEATHER BIG OCEAN BLOW

Cruiser Seattle, Covered with Ice, Arrives Here with 1,455 Aboard.

HEAVY SEAS SWEEP DECKS

Officers Complain of Conditions at Brest — Major Praises 77th Division.

With her forward decks, rigging, masts, and bridge covered with snow and ice and her starboard whaleboat missing from the davits, the United States cruiser Seattle arrived yesterday from Brest with 1,455 troops, who were all anxious to set foot on American soil. This treat, however, was debarred them for seventeen hours after the cruiser had been made fast to the south side of Pier 2, Hoboken, as it was decided that the troops should not be landed until this morning. The fifty army officers aboard were surprised at the order, but made no comment.

One of the executive officers of the Seattle said that the cruiser had encountered a series of northwesterly gales and heavy head seas from the time she left Brest, on Dec. 31, until she reached Sandy Hook. One army officer was thrown from his berth across a table in the wardroom, but the soldiers, who slept mostly in pipe bunks four deep, were fairly comfortable.

"The worst weather," the officer continued, "was from Monday to Wednesday, Jan. 6 to 8, when the troops had to be battened down below for forty-eight hours. Commencing with a whole gale of 65 to 75 miles, the velocity of the wind increased until it reached a hurricane of 90 miles on Wednesday morning at 4 A. M., when the starboard whale boat was torn from its davits on the quarter and left a part of a thwart hanging to the lashing.

"The seas broke over the decks and swept aft with irresistible force and forced their way through ports and hatchways to the decks below, making them damp and uncomfortable. The ventilators had all been unshipped and covers fitted on, so that the temperature of the lower decks, with more than 2,500 men living in them, was warm and moist to an uncomfortable degree.

"I estimated the waves that morning to be at least forty-five feet high because the bridge was that distance out of the water, and it looked as if one could step on to them as they swept over the starboard side and dashed against the funnels.

"After the hurricane the weather moderated a little and the waves subsided into what we call a rough Atlantic Winter sea, so that the soldiers could come on deck and get a little fresh air. The average speed of the Seattle was fourteen knots under normal conditions, but it was reduced down to eight knots in the storms."

The officer added that the radio apparatus grounded through being hit by the seas and set fire to the main-topgallant yard, which is used for signaling and is just under the crosstrees.

Soldier Dies of Heart Failure.

Private Frank Headley of the 309th Trench Mortar Battery, one of the returning soldiers, died on New Year's Day of heart disease. He was standing on deck and appeared to be in good health, when he suddenly dropped and was dead when two sailors ran to pick him up.

Among the 1,455 troops on the cruiser was the 4th Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun Battery, 650 officers and men; 4th Anti-Aircraft Section of large guns, 208 officers and men, and the 8th Anti-Aircraft Section of 275 troops, who were the only ones on board who had been in action. There were also some casuals and officers, and men from the 309th Trench Mortar Battery.

Praises New York Division.

Major O. J. Quane, a Spanish war veteran, who was in command of the 4th Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun Battalion and the senior officer aboard the Seattle, said that he had seen the 77th Division in action on Nov. 1 near Grand Pré, and that the New York troops fought heroically and incessantly until they had driven the enemy from Briey and had gone on to complete victory at Sedan.

"The New Yorkers were on my left," the Major continued, "the nearest being the 2d Battalion of the 305th Infantry. At Martincourt Farm the artillery put over a barrage at 1 A. M. on Nov. 1, and the men went over the top at half-past 6. The Germans had nests of machine guns near Champigneulle which caused heavy losses to the 77th Division, but they fought on and met more machine guns in the Bois-de-Loges. Nov. 4 saw the New Yorkers sweeping on to victory, and they never stopped until it was won."

Major Quane said that infantry crossing the Meuse were subjected to a harassing fire from the German airplanes. He saw seven of them using their machine guns on American troops with terrible effect until the second machine gun battalion of the anti-aircraft sections got into action bringing two of the enemy machines down and driving the other five away.

Blew Up Curious Germans.

Captain Hubert Wellcome of Waltham, Mass., in command of the 2d Battery of the 8th Anti-Aircraft Section, told a story of how a score or more of curious German infantrymen were blown up in "No Man's Land" by his battery.

The 8th Anti-Aircraft Section was operating in the Verdun sector, keeping the German planes from getting close enough to the American lines to secure useful information. One evening a huge German plane was sighted and the 2d Battery cut loose with a barrage that brought the plane flapping down into "No Man's Land." The pilot and observer were killed.

The men of the battery crawled out into "No Man's Land," and planted time bombs under the wreckage to blow it up and make it useless for the Germans, and incidentally to get it out of the way so that there would be a clear view across "No Man's Land." They had just completed their preliminary work when German infantrymen were seen creeping out from their trenches.

The Americans hurried back to their own trenches and then sat waiting. The Germans surrounded the fallen plane and were gazing at it when the bombs went off. The next day when it became light there was no plane and only a few helmets where the explosion took place.

The transport Abangares, from Bordeaux with 106 troops, and the Veendyk, from St. Nazaire with 68 officers and men, also arrived yesterday in Quarantine, and will land their complements today. The cruiser Huntington has been delayed by bad weather and is not expected to arrive until tomorrow, and the cruiser St. Louis is due today or tomorrow.

BANNER TAX YEAR FOR STATE

Corporation Collections for Six Months Nearly $15,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—Corporation tax receipts for the last half of last year amounted to nearly $15,000,000, Controller Travis announced tonight. Only once before during any similar period in the State's history has the Treasury received anywhere near this mass of revenue from corporate taxation or from any other separate tax-raising device.

Of the total, $7,456,831 came from the old franchise tax assessed upon the amount of capital stock employed in doing business within the State. The remainder was derived from the new 3 per cent. tax imposed upon the net incomes of manufacturing and mercantile corporations.

PROPOSES HEALTH SUNDAY.

Surgeon General Blue Wants Churches to Assist on Feb. 9.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, has asked the ministers of the country to set aside Feb. 9 as Health Sunday and to preach sermons emphasizing the responsibility of the nation to protect returning soldiers and sailors and the community at large, and to take vigorous measures for combating social diseases.

A proclamation by the Surgeon General has been sent to all ministers with the request that they read it from their pulpits Feb. 9. It states that the Government is asking the Churches of the country to take an active part in meeting a great national emergency, and that the war made it necessary for the nation to face frankly and courageously the menace of the blood diseases.

"Now the war is over and the period of demobilization has begun, the proclamation says, drastic measures must be taken to prevent during this period those conditions in civilian life which made these diseases the greatest cause of disability in the army.

"In the army and navy a program of law enforcement, medical measures, education, and provision for wholesome recreation was adopted," Dr. Blue states. "This program brought results. Now that the war is over the cities and towns through which the soldiers and sailors will go and to which they will return upon demobilization must be made as safe as the camps from which they have gone. The fight against this menace to our national vitality and to our homes must be vigorously continued.

"It is the social responsibility of the communities, of which the Churches of every denomination are a part, to continue the work carried on in time of war in order that the world may be made safe not only for democracy, but for posterity."

EQUITABLE BRANCHES OUT.

To Write Health and Accident Insurance Beginning Today.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society announced yesterday that it had organized a department to write health and accident insurance and that agents in all parts of the country would begin soliciting the new business today. In making the announcement President W. A. Day said that the department represented "a new development in the field of the great life insurance companies" because all accident and health insurance previously had been written "by capital stock companies organised chiefly for that purpose."

"It is a proper and natural function of any life insurance company to cover any cause of disability," said Mr. Day. "I believe that this action by the Equitable will favorably affect the accident insurance business because there are so many people uninsured or unprotected by accident and health insurance that the field is large enough for all. We will charge practically the standard rates and issue modern, standard policies."

BIG FIRE IN MONTREAL.

Starts in Automobile Plant for Which Protection Had Been Asked.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12. — Fire in the business district here today caused a property loss estimated at more than $1,000,000. Besides razing the automobile manufacturing plant of Jennings & Co. and destroying 140 machines, including nine ambulances ordered by the Canadian Government, the flames spread to the premises of the Hudson Bay Company and S. U. Carter & Co., seriously damaging them. Two firemen were injured.

The fire started in the Jennings plant. Officials of the company had previously expressed fear that the building might be set on fire because of the war work being carried out there, and had asked for military protection. It is probable that the origin of the fire will be investigated.

WHITMAN DROPS RECOUNT.

Writes Chairman Glynn He Is Not Inclined to Continue Contest.

Ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman and his advisers have decided to end the examination of the election ballots. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday afternoon by Chairman George A. Glynn of the Republican State Committee. In a letter to Chairman Glynn, Mr. Whitman said that he did not feel inclined to assume the personal responsibility for further contest regarding the recount.

"Unless the State Committee disagrees with me and insists that such contest shall be continued, I am disinclined to approve a continuance of the inspection," Mr. Whitman said in reply to a communication from the Republican Chairman. "It is, of course, possible, though to my mind extremely unlikely, that an examination of every ballot box throughout the State might result in the overcoming of the apparent majority of 14,000."

Governor Smith, who left for Albany this afternoon; Abram I. Elkus, Chairman of his Campaign Committee, and Joseph A. Kellogg, the Governor's personal counsel, had a conference at the Biltmore yesterday regarding the milk problem and the reconstruction of the Public Service Commission. It was said the conference would be resumed at Albany. The Governor, with Mrs. Smith and their daughters, Emily and Catherine, attended services yesterday morning at their parish church, St. James, 32 James Street. They walked from their home at 25 Oliver Street to the church. This was their first Sunday in town since the inauguration at the State capital and many personal friends greeted them both at church and at their home.

Women Delegates Going to Albany.

A delegation of women will go to Albany today in the interest of legislation protecting women in industry. The delegation, headed by Miss Mary M. Dreier, Chairman of the Women's Joint Legislative Conference, will appear before Speaker Sweet and the majority leaders of both houses. The bills in which the women are interested are the eight-hour day, minimum wage for women, health insurance and the bills for the protection of traction workers, office workers and elevator operators.

RULE OR RUIN

Who is attempting this?
Read these facts and decide for yourself.

The officers of the Dairymen's League demand $4.01 per 100 pounds for milk in January, and are dumping milk into fields rather than sell it for less. They say $4.01 is the cost of production.

The milk buyers of New York State have offered $3.60 per 100 pounds.

Why can't these buyers pay the farmers $4.01, which the League officers say it costs them to produce?

Because two-thirds of all the milk produced is sold, not as fresh milk, but as butter, cheese, condensed milk, ice-cream, etc.

The big commodities must be sold in open competition with the same products of the milk in other states.

Therefore, if New York State cannot make butter, cheese, and condensed milk in competition with other states, it must go out of the business.

What then is to become of this two-thirds of the milk produced? One-third gives the people all they want as fresh milk.

There is no other outlet. It simply means that the farmers producing this two-thirds will have to go out of business. That seems perfectly clear.

Now let us see what are prices for January in other States with which New York will have to compete with the two-thirds of its milk that goes into butter, cheese, and condensed milk.

Chicago	$3.56
Ohio	$3.47
Philadelphia	$3.47
Michigan	$3.90
Wisconsin	$3.00

And the New York State Manufacturers and Distributors Have Offered to Pay $3.60.

This is higher than any other section, but not so much higher as to make it impossible for them to compete with other States.

Now it is obvious that the manufacturers and distributors cannot pay much higher than other States for their milk.

If the Dairymen's League continually insists on demanding a price higher than in any part of the country, disregarding the immutable law that makes prices, then it means—

Ruin for at Least Two-Thirds of the Milk Producers of This State

And when they have reduced the production to the one-third necessary for the fresh milk users alone they can probably get any price they demand and the

COLUMBIA HONORS HER DEAD IN WAR

ALUMNI GIVE SERVICE FLAG

Relatives and Classmates Gather at Impressive Exercises—127 on Roll of Honor.

Columbia University honored her students and alumni who died in the service of the country and members of the Faculty who passed away in the year 1918 at an impressive memorial service yesterday afternoon in St. Paul's Chapel on the university grounds. The feature of the program was the presentation by Major J. August Barnard, on behalf of the alumni of the university, of a service flag with 120 gold stars to President Nicholas Murray Butler. Chaplain Raymond C. Knox announced that this number represented those whose deaths had been actually verified at the time the flag was made, but that the total would reach probably 150.

The chapel, which was decorated with the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the Allies, was crowded with the relatives and classmates of the men who had made the supreme sacrifice in the war. A few minutes before the service began the classmates assembled by classes in the university library, and, headed by a guard of honor composed of officers and enlisted men of the army, navy, and marines, all Columbia alumni, marched into the chapel.

In a brief speech of acceptance of the flag Dr. Butler spoke of the part Columbia men had played in the war, declaring that the names of the men who had served so nobly were written on freedom's scroll. Dr. Butler then read the names of the students and members of the Faculty who had died in the last year, and those who had given their lives in the war.

The roll of honor, which follows, contains 127 names and is tabulated according to classes:

Declaring that those who had died had gone forth bearing Columbia's ideals, Chaplain Knox said they sought not life's extent but rather life's worth, aiding in building a foundation on which a new world could rise.

"How fitting," he said, "that a graduate of Columbia, a poet of renown, who also laid down his life, should write:

> "Who fights for freedom goes with joyful tread
> To meet the fires of hell against him hurled,
> And has for Captain, Him whose thorn-wreathed head
> Smiles from the cross upon a conquered world.'"

Chaplain Knox told incidents connected with Columbia men in the war which showed, he said, that they had carried the spirit of the university with them.

ASSAILS NAMING OF HEARST

Dr. Manning Says Mayor Hylan Had No Right to Put Him on Committee.

Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church, yesterday issued a request to families and friends of soldiers, sailors, and marines to attend the mass meeting of welcome which is to be held next Friday night in Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Independent Citizens' Welcome Committee. In his statement, Dr. Manning charged Mayor Hylan with knowing in advance that his appointment of William R. Hearst to the city committee to greet returning soldiers would produce "hopeless discord."

"The Mayor of our city," said Dr. Manning, "has appointed a committee to welcome our homecoming troops. This action on the part of the Mayor was highly appropriate and most gratifying to all of us. The appointment of such a committee was hailed with universal approval. Citizens of every kind were ready and eager to give their help, and felt that it would be a great honor to do so. But to the amazement of all our loyal people it was learned that the Mayor had made William Randolph Hearst a member of this committee, and that he had appointed Mr. Hearst Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Military Affairs.

"John F. Hylan has a right to have W. R. Hearst for his personal friend, if this is satisfactory to him. Mayor Hylan, acting in his official capacity, has no right to appoint on the Committee of Welcome to Homecoming Troops one whose presence on that committee he knew would be deeply offensive to a great part of our citizenship, and to great numbers of the soldiers and sailors themselves. In this matter there should have been nothing but harmony and good will.

"Mayor Hylan should have known that to the families of our men and to many of the men themselves it would be a ghastly mockery to see standing on the dock to extend welcome to our troops a man who defended the sinking of the Lusitania, who has been shown to have been in close and frequent touch with German agents, whose record both before and during the war is a notorious one, and who through his newspapers did all that he could to prevent from going into the fight for righteousness the brave men whom he is now appointed to wecome home. Most of us feel that we can have nothing to do with a committee so constituted.

"We must not fail, however, to give our men the welcome which they have so nobly earned. To provide for such a welcome is the purpose of the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome. All citizens of New York, both men and women, who are in sympathy with this effort are asked to send in their names for enrollment in this committee. It is to include loyal citizens of all stocks, all faiths, and all political views, and people desiring to join are requested to send their names to 415 Madison Avenue.

"On Friday, Jan. 17, at 8 o'clock a great meeting is to be held in Madison Square Garden. Let the families and friends of our soldiers and sailors be there in overwhelming numbers to express their feeling in this matter. Nothing is too good for the men who have been risking their lives to defend us. They are the finest lot of fellows the sun ever shone on. And they are our own."

It was announced that there would be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the citizens' organization tomorrow at 415 Madison Avenue, and that arrangements would then be completed for the big mass meeting, and the complete list of speakers made public. A call for patriotic citizens to aid in financing the meeting was made yesterday, donations to be forwarded to B. L. Allen, Assistant Treasurer of the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome, at the Columbia Trust Company, 60 Broadway.

Among the men and women who have signified their intention of joining the General Committee are: John Jay Chapman, Mrs. Frederick Kernochan, Bartlett Arkell, Lee de Forest, James D. Ellsworth, Bradley A. Fiske, Mrs. Francis B. Thurber, Jr., William H. Gardiner, De Forest Hicks, Edwin O. Holter, Lyle E. Mahan, Charles E. Manierre, Charles Larned Robinson, Robert C. Sound purchasing based on the science of cost determines whether your truck is to be an asset or a liability. Unless the truck you purchase embodies the highest grade workmanship and materials, together with exact co-ordination of its component parts, your investment is impaired at the start, and soon or late you must face a loss.

"PERFORMANCE COUNTS"

She has health magnetism

Health magnetism is a great asset to a young girl. Its glow is in her cheeks and eyes. Its spring is in her step. Its fire is in her every gesture and motion. And its source is her rich, red blood which fills every part of her system with electric force and energy.

Yet the vitality-draining change from girlhood to womanhood works hardship to many young girls. Perhaps that is why your daughter is pale, dull-eyed, listless and anemic.

She may have no appetite for food, no zest for work or pleasure. She suffers from headaches, dizziness, indigestion and palpitation. Her blood probably is thin, watery and clogged with poisons.

What shall be done for her? This. Give her a thorough course in blood building. Fresh air, careful diet, absolute rest and quiet are demanded. And Pepto-Mangan will help to bring gratifying results in a reasonably short time.

Study this picture so you will know how Pepto-Mangan looks.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

Pepto-Mangan is a tonic and blood reconstructive that really can be digested and assimilated without taxing the most delicate stomach. It aids nature to fill the blood with thousands of new, sturdy red cells, which carry and distribute oxygen to every cell and tissue. Since oxygen is life itself, it helps charge the whole system with keen health and vigor. Pepto-Mangan is exceedingly pleasant to taste. Endorsed and prescribed by the medical profession.

FRIENDLY WARNING—There is only one Pepto-Mangan and that is Gude's. Sold in bottle and package as here shown. For sale at all drug stores.

MUSIC

Gatti to Give "Flammette."

"La Reine Flammette," which Mr. Gatti considers "one of the most interesting of modern French operas," will have its American premiere at the Metropolitan on Friday, Jan. 24. Miss Farrar will appear as Flammette, Mr. Lazaro as Daniele, Mr. Didur as the Prince Consort, and Mr. Rothier as Cardinal Sforza. There are more than twenty singing parts. The opera is from the play by Catulle Mendes and the music by Xaver Leroux.

"Gismonda's" World Premiere.

Henri Fevrier's "Gismonda," after Sardou's play, is being produced for the first time anywhere, under the personal direction of its composer, in Chicago tomorrow night. Mr. Campanini will conduct this opera, he announces, at the opening of his New York season at the Lexington on Monday, Jan. 27. Mary Garden has the title rôle, with a new tenor, Charles Fontaine, just from Paris, and others are Berat, Maguenat, Journet, and Huberdeau. Mr. Fevrier is also the composer of "Monna Vanna," which led the series last year at the Lexington.

Rachmaninoff with Orchestra.

Sergei Rachmaninoff, giant of the Russians, gave a sensational performance—not so much a performance, as an event—at his first reappearance with orchestra in a matinée of the Symphony Society yesterday, at Aeolian Hall. His pianoforte concerto No. 3, conceived in no academic mood, was thrilling as ne other of its kind since the early triumphs of Tschaikovsky. Its soaring theme of agonized yearning, its second part of oddly held rhythms like interrupted heartbeats, its Scherzando finale with mocking recessional of muffled drums, set nerves a tingle and bowed some heads that of late refused to nod with the neo-Scythians. Mr. Damrosch led alertly from behind the piano, as if giving reins to a runaway, and the packed audience's roar of ovation drowned the applauding hundred players of his band. The event was unprecedented, if not unforeseen. A record crowd all afternoon vainly besieged the outer doors.

Bodanzky Leads Choral Fantasy.

Artur Bodanzky conducted a rare performance of Beethoven's "Choral Fantasy" for orchestra, with opening cadenza and integral part for piano played by Olga Samaroff, and concluding verses in English translation by Natalia McFarren, sung by Metropolitan choristers, at a concert of the Friends of Music yesterday afternoon in the Ritz-Carlton ballroom. The orchestra, also of opera men, began with a little symphony, often called "Overture in Italian Style," by Mozart, and an arrangement of "Life's Storm," by Schubert, originally a two-piano piece, orchestrated by Bodanzky. Beethoven once played in his own "Fantasy" at a concert of his works in Vienna, for the composer's benefit, 110 years ago. Record has been found of a performance in New York at the Liederkranz in 1887, and later ones by Gustav Mahler and by Sam Franko. The work was heard with interest yesterday.

Zimbalist Opens His Season.

Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist, emerged from retirement to open his season in recital yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, where a large audience welcomed him. He was in superb form, trained to the hour, and gave dignity and beauty to the Goldmark concerto, not one of the greatest works, nor heard at best with piano, yet gracious in every line of aria and allegretto as Zimbalist played it. Samuel Chotzinoff accompanied him also in Corelli's "La Folia," pieces by Couperin, Rameau, Beethoven, Sarasate, and a pair of arrangements by Auer. With Raoul Vidas playing with the Philharmonic in Brooklyn, violinists were few in New York as compared with seven the preceding Sunday. Yesterday was pianists' day.

Pianist at Opera Concert.

Rudolph Ganz, who had been among Rachmaninoff's enthusiastic hearers, was himself heard last night among the Metropolitan stars. The Swiss pianist played Tschaikovsky's pianoforte concerto with the opera orchestra and a group of solo pieces by Liszt. Frieda Hempel sang the "Casta Diva" from "Norma" and the "Theme and Variations" by Proch. Sophie Braslau gave contralto airs from "La Gioconda" and "Lucrezia Borgia," and songs by Worrell, Kramer, Wood, and Vanderpool. Richard Hageman conducted the overture to "Merry Wives of Windsor" and the Suite, Op 42, by MacDowell.

McCormack Sings to Throng.

John McCormack sang songs of war and peace, as well, to a great throng at his second Hippodrome concert last evening, assisted for the first time in two years by his former Australian violinist, now Lieutenant Donald McBeath, a British flight commander. Edwin Schneider accompanied the tenor in a noble air from Handel's "Alcestis," as well as Irish folksongs, old McCormack favorites, and new ones of Messager, Rachmaninoff, Harty, Sanderson, and Lieutenant Gitz Rice. Lieutenant McBeath played pieces by Wilhelmj, Wieniawski, Chaminade, and a "Spanish Dance," Granados-Kriesler.

King Hears Puccini Opera.

Cable messages from Rome received at the Metropolitan Opera House last night told of the successful first performance in Italy of the three new one-act operas by Puccini, which recently had their world premiere in New York. The Roman audience at the Costanzi on Saturday night called out the artists in "Il Tabarro" three times and the composer twice more. It was less cordial to "Suor Angelica," but warmly enthusiastic again at "Gianni Schicchi." The King and Queen were present, with the Duchess of Aosta and others of the royal family.

THE SCREEN

There is a good melodrama at the Rivoli this week. It is "The Silver King," a Paramount-Artcraft Special. With Sir Henry Arthur Jones's old play done into a scenario by Burns Mantle and a competent cast as material, Director George Irving has produced a motion picture of sure entertainment. It comes about as near being pure screen drama as anything shown here recently. Although Mr. Irving has permitted superfluous subtitles to be stuck in his play, the fact that his pictures make them superfluous shows his ability to make pictures tell a story—if he would only let them do it alone—as they must in an artistic photoplay.

The story of "The Silver King," which is about a careless young Englishman, several villains who get him into trouble and out again, the English Derby, a murder, and other things, holds together with better continuity than most of its kind. William Faversham has the leading rôle, and deserves by his pantomimic ability rather than by his name. True, he goes through the senseless motions of talking when he could be more expressive by gesture, but he commits this sin against screen acting only occasionally, and throughout the greater part of his performance he eloquently impersonates the young Englishman in all of his manners and moods. Apparently he is one of the comparatively few stage actors who have distinct talent for the screen.

His support is excellent. Those listed on the program are Barbara Castleton, Nadia Gray, Lawrence Johnson, John Sutherland, and Warburton Gamble. One or two others not named are just as good.

The Rivoli also has "A Prisma Color Visit to Catalina," which shows gorgeous undersea life, and an interesting Pictorial.

It is a pity that "Day Dreams," in which Madge Kennedy appears at the Strand, was not produced by some one with a poetic touch. The story is about a young girl who has read of "The White Knight" and dreams that some day he will come to the rural cove in which she lives and take her away to his palace. The practical proposal of a wealthy but unimaginative maker of concrete does not interest her. It is only when a young writer comes into the water as the White Knight might have come, and shows a sympathetic understanding of her dream, that she is won.

This story seems especially adapted to the screen. The camera can catch its poetry and charm in scenes impossible on the stage; the young girl's dream can be pictured in all of its richness and romance, and the entrance of the human embodiment of the White Knight can be subtly worked into the dream fabric so as to make it a harmonious part of the poem. But none of this is done. In one place the rejected suitor is described as "a matter-of-fact concrete man," and it would seem as if he had staged the production.

The romantic and realistic are brought together with so many clashes, cheap subtitles are so often used where scenes are necessary to express poetic fancies, the sentimental heroine is so frequently made simply silly, that all illusion is destroyed.

Miss Kennedy and the others in the cast do as well as they can under the circumstances.

James Montgomery Flagg has an amusing comedy, "One Every Minute," on the Strand bill, and "Montana Mountain Adventures," one of Major Jack Allen's scenics, shows hunting scenes that many will find of interest. The musical program includes the "Miserere" scene from "Il Trovatore," in silhouette, with Adela Bartlett and Ralph Erolle singing the parts.

The Rialto program includes "Out of the Shadow," in which Pauline Frederick, Wyndham Standing, and Ronald Byram appear to advantage under the direction of Emile Chautard; "The Woods of Paris," released by the Educational Films Corporation, under which title are shown some fascinating scenes in color of Dutch children, as well as views around the French capital, and "A Photoplay Magazine Little Journey in Filmland," which shows stars of the screen at work and off duty.

Allen Holubar's "The Heart of Humanity" continues in its fourth week at the Broadway.

The first of Burton Holmes's series of Travelogues, "With the Yanks in England," was the attraction at Carnegie Hall last night and will be repeated there this afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock.

TO DISCUSS FOREIGN TRADE.

Redfield Expected to Clear Up America's Policy at Dinner.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, will come from Washington to preside at a dinner to be given by the Council of Foreign Relations in the Hotel Astor tomorrow night. Accompanying him will be W. C. Huntington, Commercial Attaché at Petrograd; Pierce C. Williams, Commercial Attaché at Paris; W. S. Montavon, Commercial Attaché at Lima, Peru; B. S. Cutler, Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Dr. S. W. Stratton, Director of the Bureau of Standards; Nelson C. Brown, Trade Commissioner, Lumber; J. W. Sanger, Trade Commissioner, Advertising, and Charles A. Rogers of the Advisory Industrial Committee.

Secretary Redfield and his associates are attending the dinner, it is said, to answer any questions as to the foreign trade policies of this country asked by business men and bankers who will be in attendance. It is to clear up uncertainties which have arisen in the minds of many as to the department's policy that the Secretary has been invited with his staff to the dinner.

Some of those who will be in attendance are Guy E. Tripp, Chairman of the Board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank; Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company; Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co.; E. H. Outerbridge of the New York State Chamber of Commerce; Jules S. Bache, Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, and Oscar S. Straus.

800 Diners Greet Caruso.

The Society of Arts and Sciences gave a dinner last night at the Hotel Biltmore in honor of Enrico Caruso. Among other guests were Geraldine Farrar, Otto H. Kahn, Consul General Tritoni, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Andreas de Segurola, Senator Salvatore Cotillo, Rubin Holdmark, W. J. Henderson, De Wolf Hopper, John B. Stanchfield, and Augustus Thomas, who was toastmaster. Each of the guests spoke in praise of the work of Mr. Caruso for the Allies and several nominated him "the greatest singer of his time." There were 800 members of the society present.

Governor to Attend Dinner Here.

Eight hundred men and women active in New York's political life will give a joint dinner at the Hotel Majestic next Saturday evening to former Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney of General Sessions, and to Mrs. Harry Hastings, the suffrage leader in the Fifteenth Assembly District. Governor Smith, Mayor Hylan, and Police Commissioner Enright will attend.

"A CONTRACT WITH CRIME."

Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's proposal that the Russian Bolsheviki be invited to send peace delegates to Paris on the same footing of recognition that is accorded to the Kolchak, Denikine, and Tschaikovsky governmental organizations is an adventure in diplomatic darkness and unreason of which the motives cannot too soon be explained to an amazed world. It is not merely amazing, it is inexplicable, dumfounding. If the delegates of proletariat tyranny and assassination are to be admitted, why exclude the representatives of dethroned autocracy? Let the Hohenzollern, the Hapsburg, all the kings in exile, be asked to plead their causes at Paris, to the end that the hymns of divine right and the devil's litany of class hatred may together swell the lofty chorus of reconciliation. WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN and TROTZKY and LIEBKNECHT are brothers in principle and in deed. They would establish and maintain the rule by force of the few over the many. How could the representatives of democratic nations extend the right hand of fellowship to one and withhold it from the other?

What secret aims of British policy this welcoming of the red-handed enemies of human society may conceal we cannot even conjecture. But we know that it bespeaks a willingness to abandon Russia altogether, to give over to anarchy and destruction her millions of people. There was hope that in the natural order and progress of their blind misrule the Bolsheviki would destroy themselves; there was some ground for the hope, even though they have been cruelly betrayed by the Allies, that the more stable and sober-minded elements of her population might restore peace and order in Russia. But this overture of the British Prime Minister must give direct and powerful encouragement not only to the madmen who are cutting the throats of their fellow-Russians, robbing their neighbors, plundering banks, destroying all industries, and killing American and allied soldiers, but to their sympathizers and abettors all over the world, many of them in this country.

This astounding reversal of allied policy comes at the worst possible moment. The Bolshevist rabble in Berlin, regarded as dangerous in the beginning of their revolt, as was shown by the gingerly way in which they were treated by the Ebert Government, are losing their fight, overcome by a display of greater force and by the evidence that the mass of the German people have no sympathy with them. There has been a threatening Bolshevist uprising in Buenos Aires, the red flag was displayed in the streets, a general strike was ordered, many persons were killed. General DELLEPAINE has used the firm hand, and order will be restored. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE himself has secured a new lease of power from an electorate that rejected conspicuous candidates suspected of too much tenderness for the Bolshevist form of "democracy." Then why in the world choose this particular time for making what Foreign Minister PICHON justly denounces as a "contract with crime"?

This is a return to old and shameful maxims of British policy, to the days when British Ministries, British money, and British arms kept the Turk alive and on his feet, maintained him as a power to threaten the peace of Europe and shock the moral sensibilities of the world by the atrocities of his rule over races kept in bondage to him. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE, it appears, would make a fresh league with death, another covenant with assassins. Even Lord SALISBURY, although he was one of those who brought back "peace with honor" from Berlin, lived to perceive the immorality of British dealings in behalf of Turkey.

What is the meaning of this altogether unexpected exhibition of fondness for enemies of the human race? Who in the British Cabinet originated or sanctioned it? The new Ministry was in process of formation at the time the overture was made. Who in that body of Conservatives is its sponsor, what does it mean? STEPHEN PICHON, honor be to his name, has made answer for France. She will entertain no envoys from "the bloody" and disorderly tyranny of the Bol-"sheviki." That must be the answer of every democracy. The Allied Powers and the United States can make no dealings with the thugs Potsdam hired and paid to stab them in the back.

ILLUSIONS IN HUNGARY.

Count MICHAEL KAROLYI, who appears to be the Government of Hungary for the time being, has talked to an American correspondent about war and peace. In peace as in war he is more able and willing to recognize things as they are than most of the other statesmen of the Central Powers, but he still cherishes some strange views. He admits that Hungary has lost the war, has been beaten—none of the revolting talk of a peace between equals which we have heard in Bulgaria, in Turkey, and till lately in Germany—and that her whole hope now lies in the honest application of the Fourteen Points. But "Hungary must be a geographical unit," whatever that means, and he protests violently against what he regards as aggression by Czechoslovaks, Jugoslavs, and Serbs on Hungarian territory, but which was in point of fact merely the spontaneous rising of subject populations as soon as Hungarian garrisons were rendered impotent, in order to break away from Hungary and join their own people.

The Fourteen Points, as amended, include adequate promise of the freedom of the peoples whom the Magyars so ruthlessly oppressed. When KAROLYI talks of his geographical unit he perhaps means, for instance, that the million or so of Magyars in the bend of the Carpathians ought to be attached to the rest of Hungary; but in doing this he would have to bring back into the Magyar fold some two million Rumanians. Are we going to give more consideration to a million of our enemies than to twice that number of our friends? KAROLYI is a relatively innocuous person as Magyar statesmen go, but the Magyar propaganda is still alive, and will try to save as much out of the fire as possible.

KAROLYI repeats what he often said during the war, that Berlin dragged Hungary into it. To a certain extent this is true, but it is also true that Hungary was dragged in with great willingness because the political and economic interest of the ruling nobility coincided with that of Berlin. KAROLYI's principal claim to confidence is his apparently honest desire for very considerable internal reforms, which will, if carried out, put Hungary in such a position that she can honestly co-operate with her neighbors. But the neighbors must first be freed from danger of her domination, which has been as tyrannical as any other seen in our day.

THE MISSING CYCLOPS.

It is now more than ten months since the naval collier Cyclops, 19,000 tons, with a complement of 295 men, sailed from Barbados, and was never seen again. When time passed and nothing was heard of her, the Navy Department ordered a search in the West Indies, on the Spanish Main, and along the coast of northern South America. Cruisers and destroyers looked into every nook and cranny of the islands, and scanned every known reef. If driven ashore, she should have been seen, for the Cyclops, with her eight steel derricks, making her appear at a distance like a composite of several battleships, was singularly conspicuous. The West Indies yielded no sign. As the months went by the huge collier was counted among the "missing ships" and given up for lost. Torpedoed "without a trace" was the common conjecture.

In the National Marine for January GEORGE NOBLE speculates about the fate of the Cyclops. If she was burst asunder by an internal explosion and foundered, wreckage and floating bodies should have furnished a clue. Nothing was found by the fleet of searchers. Was she captured by an enemy raider and taken to a German port? There was not enough coal on board for the passage of the Atlantic. And would the enemy have foregone the triumph of boasting his success? The Cyclops had a wireless system. No call was picked up, and ships were about on all sides. The theory that fumes from manganese in her hold asphyxiated the crew has been rejected, for measures had been taken to eliminate that danger. What, then, could have happened to her? Naval officers are inclined to believe that the Cyclops went down with all on board in a hurricane. Pointing out that she "carried a remarkably high and heavy superstructure," Mr. NOBLE says:

> In case of a heavy list to port or starboard, perhaps to the extent of forty-five degrees, the Cyclops, burdened with her derricks, was perhaps unable to swing back to equilibrium, crashed over to one side, and quickly settled.

This will not convince those who have in mind the havoc wrought by the enemy's submarines. On a night of half lights a torpedo could hardly miss her towering hull. Rent at the water line, the Cyclops would sink quickly. But even then the disappearing ship would have left wreckage adrift on the face of the deep. No less than twenty-four steamships are among the "missing ships" of the war period. Mystery still shrouds two vanished French barks, an American bark, and two Boston square-riggers. Did the enemy destroy all of them, and with them every man of their crews? It is more than unlikely, for the elemental sea draws down many a ship when not a shot the world over is being fired in anger. They strike uncharted reefs, and if boats are lowered the boats are engulfed. Derelicts awash rend their fabrics. They founder in tempests which they cannot weather, such storms as CONRAD's Narcissus almost succumbed to. JOHN MASEFIELD's "salt green tossing sea" can be very cruel when it goes mad. It is easy enough to attribute the effacement of the Cyclops to a treacherous torpedo, but the list of "missing ships," a prey to wind and wave, is now so long that no one would care to count them.

THE NEW BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's Cabinet is much the old one, with some shiftings and additions. Mr. BONAR LAW, who has been doing at least three men's work in three prime capacities, takes the decorative post of Lord Privy Seal and retains the highly arduous one of leader of the House. He is succeeded as Chancellor of the Exchequer by Mr. AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, who held that office with distinction from 1903 to 1906.

Mr. LAW, Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, Mr. BALFOUR, Mr. WALTER LONG, Lord MILNER, Lord CURZON, these are familiar Conservative figures. In this as in the preceding Cabinet most of the greatest posts are held by Conservatives. There seems to be some surprise at this. Mr. GEORGE's program includes land distribution to soldiers, housing, transportation reform, an extensive, if as yet vague, policy of reconstruction. Will the Conservatives support these radical measures?

Why not? The preceding Coalition Cabinet had a Conservative majority. In the War Cabinet Mr. GEORGE was the only Liberal. The Conservatives had the largest representation in the House. A sweeping extension of the franchise, educational and agricultural reforms, price-fixing, and what not—more radical legislation than was ever put on the statute book in the same time—were enacted under the Coalition. Some of the Conservatives like to point to the Franchise act of 1867. They say that this and the Combinations act of 1875 started labor and democracy on their upward course. At any rate, party names are nothing, and perhaps Americans have always been a little too tender to that of "Liberal."

A MODEL HOSPITAL.

The opening this week of the Carson C. Peck Memorial Hospital in Brooklyn, on the high ground at the junction of Albany Avenue and Crown Street, adds materially to Brooklyn's reputation for humane and helpful interests. The need of hospitals throughout the country is great enough, and is, of course, especially great in crowded centres of population; but the quality of hospital service is still more important, and the new Brooklyn building, well placed, overlooking the city, with a glimpse of distant water, is a fine product of intelligence and skill in adapting every detail to giving the patient the best chance for recovery and minimizing his discomfort during illness.

This new hospital represents a comforting tendency in the modern treatment of the sick, a swinging toward consideration of their personal needs and wishes without sacrificing any of the authority of knowledge and trained judgment. No patient who has lived in hospitals of an only too familiar old-fashioned type can hear of a place in which he can have not only the technical services he may require, but freedom from noise, prompt attendance, hot meals, fresh pure air and sunlight, beauty of view, the pleasure of good color and well-designed furnishings in his room, and, what to many will be the last word in comfort, the privacy of a cubicle inclosure if a private room is beyond his means, without feeling that this latest development of the hospital idea justifies its related word, hospitality.

RUSSIA IN THE SENATE.

Senator HITCHCOCK sufficiently explained to the Senate why we had sent troops to Russia, but he was not so fortunate in explaining why we had sent so few. He said that the Administration had been criticised first for not yielding to the desire of Britain and France that a large force of troops be sent there, and then for sending any at all; and this, he said, illustrated "the embarrassment that confronted President WILSON in deciding what policy to adopt." Surely this does not properly represent the Administration. Confronted by two opposite criticisms, the President cannot have decided to compromise by trying to please both by sending troops, but not troops enough. This is what Mr. HITCHCOCK implies, and he cannot be correct. The only question before the President was what would be right and necessary, not what would please two irreconcilable sets of critics.

Mr. HITCHCOCK informs the country that we are in Russia in accordance with Marshal FOCH's plans. "He insists, I understand, on maintaining the status that is there; in fact, he is anxious to have more done." If the Marshal is "anxious to have more done," it is for military reasons. It cannot be, despite what Mr. HITCHCOCK hints, that political reasons, a desire to please everybody, to carry water on both shoulders, can weigh against the Generalissimo's judgment of military needs.

Senator KING of Utah described the work of the troops on the Murman coast as a defensive campaign. "Does that mean," asked Senator THOMAS of Colorado, "that the Czechoslovaks will be abandoned to their fate?" "I am afraid," replied Senator KING, "that is the situation, although I "would not want to go that far." He hoped that the Czechoslovaks would not be so abandoned. "We cannot find a strong enough term," he said, "to characterize such cowardice." He was not speaking of military cowardice, but of political cowardice. Surely the Allies do not want to incur the reproach that would be theirs if their gallant defenders were thus abandoned.

Senator BORAH's contribution to the discussion was unworthy of him. He expressed his belief that the Bolsheviki are supported by the people, and that "the Russian people have the same "right to establish a socialistic State "as we have to establish a republic." The nature of Mr. BORAH's constituency does not excuse such an argument as this. It is not because the Bolsheviki have established a socialistic State that the world is afraid of them; it is because they have established a rule of anarchy and massacre at home and intend ultimately to make war on every Government in the world; it is because they are enemies of society. The attempt to represent the Allies as strangling an innocent republic because it is a socialistic one is one of which Mr. BORAH must be ashamed, since he knows as well as any one what the real state of the case is. Shall we wait for the Bolsheviki to conquer Europe and then carry their despotism elsewhere?

Mr. BORAH certainly knows that the life of no Socialist in Russia is safe if he antagonizes the Bolsheviki, and that the other Socialist parties have been suppressed by terror, and yet he unblushingly talks about the clique of anarchy and universal war as "a socialistic State." Mr. BORAH must pay the penalty of being known as a man of intellect; the same excuses cannot be made for him that are made for men of less intelligence, among whom are certain United States Senators.

HERTLING'S STORY.

In the interview given by ex-Chancellor VON HERTLING three days before his death, he explained his hatred of Prussia by saying: "Evidently one "reasons very differently when deafened by the clamors of victory, and "every one believed in victory." It is a proof of the foolishness of those who expected that by cutting the war short and treating with Germany on even terms they could not only obtain good terms, but even encourage a German revolution. Victorious nations do not have revolutions. As for Prussia, her leadership was all right as long as she gave victory; the other Germans, as HERTLING interprets them, turned on her only in the moment of defeat.

All Germany was convinced in July, he says, that the Allies would send in peace proposals by Sept. 1. "Certainly our situation was most dan-"gerous, in the sense that we had "played our last card. But what did "that matter, since we were sure we "were winning?" He was Chancellor then, and we cannot doubt his description of the German state of mind at the high tide of German success. Victory would have solidified the militarist rule and insured peace terms that would have stripped the Allies to their bones.

This certainty, says HERTLING, was increased by the information the Germans got, especially from France. They believed that there was going on among the Allies a "process of de-"moralization, about which well-"meaning agents furnished daily fan-"tastic reports." The German Secret Service again. Adept as it is in slimy methods, it is, and always has been, a total failure in giving its Government information about the condition of enemy countries. In 1914 it told its Government that England could not enter the war because it was crumbling, and that France would be easy to whip because it was degenerate. No other Secret Service would be guilty of such errors. It is characteristic of the German mind that it sees what it wishes to see. The German is an optimist in that respect.

On July 15, when the Germans resumed their offensive, "we expected "grave events in Paris for the end of "July." The offensive was to help them along. Three days later, "on "the 18th, even the most optimistic "among us understood that all was "lost. The history of the world was "played out in three days." They based their last play on the "fantastic reports of well-meaning agents."

The ex-Crown Prince, in an interview published in The World yesterday, gives some further details. He says that before the Rheims offensive in July he reported to Great Headquarters that there were forty American divisions in France, having received this information from his intelligence officers. Great Headquarters replied: "Nonsense. Impossible. "There are only fourteen American "divisions in France, and five of "those are no good and can't fight." Did ever a nation go galloping to its downfall in such a farcical manner?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Neuroses of War Explained.

Few more valuable and suggestive contributions to war psychology have been made than is a report recently presented to the British Medical Committee by Dr. W. H. R. RIVERS, late of the Craiglockhart War Hospital, Edinburgh, and now reprinted with the approval of the British and American military authorities. The report deals with the neuroses of soldiers that are grouped under the familiar, but most inaccurate, name of "shell shock."

To explain these affections Dr. RIVERS presents and strongly supports the theory that underlying them all is a conflict between the instinct of self-preservation, so deeply implanted in every human being, and the duty or obligation, in military life almost or quite as strong, to repress all manifestations of fear. The resultant neuroses he divides into three types.

The first includes those in which the disorder takes a definite physical form, such as paralysis, mutism, contracture, or one or another failure of sense perception. These are identical with the symptoms producible by means of hypnotism, and they are those more often shown by the private soldier than by the officer, because the training of the former, more than that of the latter, makes him easily affected by suggestive influences, and he is more easily and longer content with a simple solution of the conflict between fear and duty.

The neuroses of the officer tend to show themselves in lack of physical and mental energy, and disorders of sleep and the circulatory and digestive systems, on the one hand, and in depression, restlessness, and irritability, on the other. These are the familiar consequences of anxiety, and the officer's fear is less that of failing to be brave than that of inability to carry the burden of his responsibilities with respect to his men, his regiment, and his division.

Neuroses of the third sort are definitely psychical and do not differ from those of civil life except that they are less severe and fixed.

A Freudian Without Admitting It.

There is much more to the Rivers report than a mere classification of the war neuroses. Its author goes thoroughly into the conditions of training camp and active service that develop there, and he makes valuable suggestions as to methods of prevention and cure. Curiously enough, though, the theories formulated, to anybody who has read the Freudian psychology, are obviously Freudian, yet Dr. RIVERS writes rather disparagingly of the Austrian physician and dwells on the refusal of a large part of the medical profession to accept FREUD's view of the neuroses. That, too, is a phenomenon made familiar by the history of science, and—well, FREUD would have no difficulty in explaining it, and Dr. RIVERS could do it, too, if he undertook the amusing task. It is only another case of "conflict" and "repression."

He is more profitably employed, perhaps, when he explains the soldier's traditional tendency to be profane. Oaths have their use in war, and "our army in Flanders" set a standard which all enemies since have emulated, not in wickedness, but to give needed relief to emotions that were deprived of other forms of expression by the stern bans of military service.

Bolshevist Friends of Peace.

There is nothing at all surprising in the news that the German Bolshevists profess a bitter hatred of bloodshed, and with great heat denounce the Ebert Government for its use of machine guns and cannon. The professions and denunciations are doubtless quite sincere, and, of course, the followers of Dr. LIEBKNECHT see nothing to excite a smile in their declaration that all responsibility for the slaughter going on in Berlin rests on the sanguinary and depraved folk who will not let the Bolsheviki do what they choose.

Of course, such logic seems wildly absurd, and therefore extremely funny, to people who do not reason that way, but it is a way differing in no particular or degree from what has been heard from innumerable Germans ever since the war began and all through its continuance. With entire seriousness we have been told by Germans who were as far as possible from being Bolsheviki that all blame for the slaughter and devastation of the four dreadful years should be put, not on Germany, but on the nations—Belgium, England, and last of all America—that insisted on, and persisted in, opposing the execution of Germany's righteous and benevolent plans for improving, elevating, and refining the world.

It was not Germany that "prolonged the war"; always she yearned for peace and would have given it for the asking—on terms pleasing to herself; terms that therefore should have been pleasing to everybody else. For reasons quite beyond her comprehension they were not pleasing to anybody else, and the prolongation of the war went on. So, too, when the Americans used sawed-off shotguns in the Argonne, the Germans were inexpressibly shocked. An unfamiliar weapon, unmentioned in any code of international law, had been used—against Germans! Naturally, they were horrified and protested vehemently. Poison gases, bayonets with barbs, the bombing of undefended towns, the slaughter of women and children, the bombing of cathedrals—they were different because deemed essential to German victory.

Encouraging Tenants to Revolt.

Not only has one of our courts upheld as valid the decree of our Sanitary Code that landlords must keep up a temperature of 68 degrees in the apartments they rent, it has also come near to upholding the right of a tenant, when that temperature is not maintained, in feeding the furnace himself and in knocking down and sitting on the landlord who tries to prevent the tenant from doing it.

The Special Sessions Justices did not say quite that, in the case of Altman vs. Doondif, last week, but they let both the landlord and the tenant go on parole, and evidently were inclined to view the two offenses as balancing each other.

Thus do the woes of the real estate owner pile up higher and higher. Once the only clear and definite right a tenant had in New York was to pay his rent, and if he failed therein he was shot at sunrise, or thrown down the elevator shaft, or forced to camp out in the park. (Just what the penalty was is now forgotten, so remote is that happy era.) But now all is changed, and upon landlords there is almost as much of compulsion to keep their contracts as there is on tenants! One might well ask, "Whither are we drifting?" for surely the rapids are below us.

A Passport Complaint.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Today's morning papers contain a dispatch to the Helsingfors Extrabladet that "no Russian can get a passport to leave the country (Russia) unless he signs a declaration that he will propagate Bolshevism." If an American citizen wants a passport nowadays he has to sign an oath of allegiance first, pay $2 down, and then—he does not receive a passport, but $1 returned.

FIND LOFTY IDEALS IN ROOSEVELT'S LIFE

Pulpits of All Creeds Speak as One to Teach the Lesson of His Work for Righteousness.

TAKEN WHEN MOST NEEDED

A Chair of Americanism, to Bear His Name, Proposed for Every Higher Seat of Learning.

There was scarcely a church in all New York in which the pastor did not take occasion to pay tribute yesterday to Theodore Roosevelt, and to find in his life some spiritual lesson. In many churches there were special prayers for Colonel Roosevelt, and in others his favorite hymns were sung.

"We are mourning a great American whose sincerity of purpose and deep moral conviction made him not only an incalculable strength to our own land, but a force felt throughout the world," said the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning in Trinity Church. "The outstanding note of his life was his love of right and his fearless courage in upholding it. He never hesitated to take his open stand or flinched from saying what he believed needed to be said. He sometimes aroused strong and even fierce opposition, but in the end he was admired, loved and trusted even by most of those who disagreed with him.

"To our human eyes it seems as though he could not be spared, but his work was finished and it was done faithfully and well. May God give him peace and blessing in the other life where he now is, and may God give to many of our men and women the strong moral purpose, the deep love of country, and the fearless courage to uphold the right which he gave to Theodore Roosevelt."

In the Madison Avenue Baptist Church the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton preached on "Our Debt to the Dead—A Tribute to Theodore Roosevelt."

"Last week the country was thrilled with the news that the greatest American had passed," he said. "There swept over the nation a sense of irreparable loss. It seemed we could ill spare him, less now than ever before, now when his message and leadership are most needed. Roosevelt's courage faced terrible odds in the early days of his Presidency. It is significant that the very men with whom he was then engaged in a death grip are today the most hopeful in America. The danger now lies with the other extreme, the Bolshevist element. The next four years alien ideas and alien purposes that are among us will do something if we neglect to act in a manner not to be misunderstood. This is precisely where a Theodore Roosevelt is wanted."

"Theodore Roosevelt was one of America's very great men," said the Rev. Dr. W. Norman Guthrie in St. Mark's in the Bouwerie. "He was one of those very great men who was loved even for his faults and loved even by men who fought with him and disagreed with him. Just as God loved David even though David sometimes was a scamp, for even the sins of the world's elect may be lovable, this does not mean that those of ordinary men are."

Rabbi Samuel Schuman in Temple Beth El preached on Roosevelt, saying:

"We carry into the sanctuary the national sorrow in which we share, and we are privileged in the words of the Jewish sage of old to praise famous men and to give honor to him who was the honor of his generation and who was in great measure the glory of his time. His was a wonderful personality and his exceptional mental and spiritual many-sidedness appealed to the imagination and won all hearts. There was not the least taint of prejudice, racial or otherwise, in his make-up. It is not improper, though we speak as Americans, to note the fact that he was always a conspicuous friend of Americans of Jewish faith, and he seized every opportunity to voice the absolute equality of citizens of Jewish racial origin or religious faith, proclaiming them an integral part of the American people. He did this once most emphatically in his simple and direct way by saying that he saw no reason why if the man had the ability a Jew could not become President of the United States, even as a Protestant or Catholic might be elected by his fellow-citizens.

"His humor was once most impressively illustrated in a matter that came home to us Jews. A notorious anti-Semite agitator had come to these shores from Germany. He wished to deliver an address in a public hall in this city. Roosevelt, despising the man, wished to give him a lesson in free speech in America and in protection of law. He was allowed to speak; he was given a bodyguard of police to look out for him, and every man of the bodyguard was a Jew. I am inclined to think that our beloved 'Teddy' even punctured the hide of this hidebound anti-Semite. I think he left this country a wiser if not a better man."

The establishment of a Theodore Roosevelt chair of Americanism in each higher institution of learning was proposed by the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young in the Bedford Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn last evening as a most fitting type of memorial. "Roosevelt is Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln brought up to date," the pastor said. "He is the epitome of what this nation stands for. He is forever fascinating. There was never a simpler, kindlier, more natural, more companionable man, none who could make a better teacher of a boys' bible class or a better President of the greatest republic."

W. H. Van Benschoten spoke in St. James Methodist Episcopal Church last night on "Roosevelt as His Lawyer Knew Him." Mr. Van Benschoten said even Colonel Roosevelt's great public characteristics were not so marvelous as the personality he showed to those in his confidence. He gave all questions careful and thorough consideration, he added, and deferred to advisers who knew a subject better than he after there had been an interchange of views. When Colonel Roosevelt was attending the libel suit of William Barnes against him at Syracuse, Mr. Van Benschoten said, he received news of the sinking of the Lusitania and insisted on denouncing that outrage, though he was warned that several men on the jury were of German extraction.

In Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, there was a memorial meeting at which addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis and Frederick M. Davenport. The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the pastor, spoke of Colonel Roosevelt at a memorial service in the Central Congregational Church last evening and also at a meeting at the Bedford Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association in the afternoon.

At the Congregational Church of the Evangel, Bedford Avenue and Hawthorne Street, United States Judge Thomas Ives Chatfield of Brooklyn and Congressman Frederick W. Rowe of that borough were the speakers. A Roosevelt memorial service was held in the Janes Methodist Episcopal Church, Reid Avenue and Monroe Street, in the morning, where in the evening a bronze honor roll bearing the names of 148 young men of the church who served in the war was unveiled. Bishop Luther B. Wilson, who conducted services at the grave of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt in France, delivered an address at the unveiling.

Colonel Roosevelt's fellow-townsmen in Oyster Bay again found opportunity to show their love for him yesterday, churches of all denominations holding services in his memory. At Christ Episcopal Church, where the funeral services were held, the Rev. Dr. George E. Talmage said:

"May I say in this family circle that the thing that impressed me most last Wednesday was not that the world was represented at the funeral, as indeed it was, nor the strong faces of the intellectual giants who came to pay their tribute, but the tears in their eyes. This bore testimony to what we already knew but did not know that we knew until we had felt our loss. If we had taken the trouble to analyze our feelings we would have realized that what held us to him most was that we knew him for a man, a generous, everyday, sincere Christian man."

Father Charles Canivan paid tribute to him at each mass at St. Dominick's, where Colonel Roosevelt frequently visited, and the Rev. Dr. H. S. Dunning talked lovingly of him in the Presbyterian Church. Several thousand persons visited the grave during the day, many of them in uniform.

Tribute from General Wood.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—Major Gen. Leonard Wood, in his address at a Theodore Roosevelt memorial service in the Old North Church here today, told a gathering that packed the edifice that the statesmen of Europe, as well as the soldiers in the ranks at the front, were anxious to learn the views of Theodore Roosevelt on the war, according to his experience and observation.

"I went along the lines in France from end to end for months," said General Wood, "and twenty men asked me to give them Roosevelt's views, to one who asked the views of all other men combined in this country or in Europe.

"I met President Poincaré, Premier Clemenceau, and Marshal Joffre, together with a large number of other distinguished French leaders, and almost their first questions were concerning Theodore Roosevelt. All of them paid tribute to his influence in bringing America into the war."

General Wood, in a brief interview, declined to discuss the mention of his name, among others, at the Chicago meeting last week, on the matter of his being a Presidential possibility.

At the church General Wood spoke with marked emotion, confessing afterward it was hard for him to talk. In his address he said:

"We have lost a real man; a leader at a time when he can ill be spared. But though his voice is silent, his inspiration will live with us forever."

Services in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Memorial services for Theodore Roosevelt were held today in the churches of Washington, ministers, priests and rabbis paying tribute to the memory of the former President. Services were also held by the Young Men's Christian Association at Liberty Hut, where several members of Congress spoke. Bishop Harding of the District of Columbia Diocese conducted the services at the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Albans, the cornerstone of which was laid by Mr. Roosevelt when he was President.

ALIVE TO TROOPS' COMFORT.

Col. Roosevelt Planned for Their Welfare on His Sick Bed.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Jan. 12.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt planned for the comfort of the American soldiers in France and at home while he was on his sick bed. It was announced today that at the time Colonel Roosevelt allowed episodes from his writings to be filmed by Frederick L. Collins of the McClure Films, Inc., he stipulated in his contract that "all profits accruing to me personally during the period of the war shall be given by me to the Red Cross and possibly other war organizations."

After the armistice was signed, the Colonel wrote Mr. Collins and asked that the wording "during the war" be changed to read "until all of the men are returned to their homes from the war." The Colonel explained that he knew that the soldiers would need entertainment more than before because of the tedious days of peace making. Although the change had been made the Colonel had not signed the new contract. His wishes will be carried out.

Want Yellowstone for Memorial.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 12.—A movement to change the name of Yellowstone Park, America's greatest public pleasure ground and game reserve, to Roosevelt Park as a national memorial to Theodore Roosevelt was started today by Mayor Harry Davis and leading citizens of Cleveland.

VLADIVOSTOK, Thursday, Jan. 9.—Flags at the American, allied and Czechoslovak headquarters are flying from half-staff out of respect for Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

CHURCHES ASK $10,000,000.

Protestant Denominations Plan Extensive After-War Campaign.

The International Emergency Committee of the Protestant churches announced yesterday the sums to be raised by eleven of the fourteen denominations which in a few weeks will start a co-operative national campaign for $10,000,000 to meet the after-war needs of the churches. Bishop Theodore Irving Reese, coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio, is Chairman of the committee, and George C. Tamblyn, with headquarters at 289 Fourth Avenue, is director of the campaign.

The amounts to be raised are: Methodist Episcopal, $2,000,000; Presbyterian, $1,750,000; Lutheran, $500,000; Baptist, $300,000; Protestant Episcopal, $250,000; Disciples of Christ, $125,000; Reformed Church in the United States, $110,000; Congregational, $100,000; Reformed Church in America, $70,000; Evangelical Synod, $33,000; United Evangelical, $10,000.

Announcement of the immediate inauguration of a nation-wide Victory Campaign "to insure spiritual democracy at home and for reconstruction abroad" was made last night by the Rev. Dr. Fred P. Haggard, Director of the National Committee of Northern Baptist Laymen. F. W. Ayer, Chairman of the committee, said efforts would be directed largely to holding meetings at which victory teams would point out the need for work among returning soldiers and sailors, and particularly of rehabilitating Baptist churches in France.

RAINY DAY.

"Look out for the Rainy Day," I heard,
Yet took small heed, as any bird,
That frets not away his sunshine hour
With fear that tomorrow's skies may lower.
When my Rainy Day at last came along,
I had had a good time, and met it with song!

But you? I shall not advise you—nay!
You will look out for the Rainy Day?
Gather, and gather, with diligent hand;
Thriftily still add land to land;
Have an eye to your budget, scan each charge;
Pleasure with profit carefully weigh;
Owe nought to any—no friend in your debt—
And nowise enlarge beyond the marge
That your provident forefathers long ago set.

All this follow . . . but do not forget,
When wealth you amass, as well you may,
There was use for you in the Rainy Day
(Use—but you've lost it forevermore)
Past your belief—soft kinship with Grief,
And the face of a Genius you never met,
And now cannot meet, had looked in at your door;
A guest had entered and shared your store,
With a grace that blessed your scanty sheaf—
Enough, henceforth, and something to spend,
Though silver or gold you could not pay. . . .
One at Assisi named a name,
When unto his cell the Genius came.
There are other names, but this, in chief—
Good Saint Poverty—man's best friend!
Pity when Prudence and Thrift so fend,
She will not tarry upon her way. . . .
For the rain of the Rainy Day revives—
Or would, if they risked it—certain dry lives.

It was well for me—this Rainy Day.
But you? How shall I dare to say?

ASKS REPUBLICANS FOR NEW DRAFT LAW

Universal Training Association Calls on Hays to Espouse It as Party Measure.

SEES NEED OF NEW ARMY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Asserting that universal military training affords the only fair means of filling the ranks of the American Army of Occupation in Europe after the proclamation of peace, the National Association for Universal Military Training, of which General S. B. M. Young is President, has asked the Republican Party to take up the fight for establishment of the principle.

In a letter sent yesterday to Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, in Chicago, Secretary Sheets of the organization says:

"If the Republican National Committee would make a declaration for this principle now, as was done by the Saratoga convention last Summer, and as was done by the League of Republican Clubs of New York State last November, it would have a tremendous effect upon the effort now in progress to establish a sound military policy for the United States.

"The Hamilton Club of Chicago has indorsed universal military training and I sincerely trust you will take immediate action on this request. To date, the Republican Party, as a party and through its individual members, has taken the leadership for military preparedness and prosecution of the war to the ultimate victorious demand for an unconditional surrender. While this association has been and is nonpartisan, it is impossible to blink at the fact that this question is rapidly crystallizing around Republican leadership in and out of Congress."

In a separate memorandum the association asserts that, as a result of unpreparedness, it was not until Sept. 12, 1918, that "America placed her first independent army on the firing line—over four years after the beginning of the world war and over seventeen months after America acknowledged the existence of a state of war with Germany, and barely two months before the victorious ending of the war."

Sees No Other Alternative.

In regard to the necessity of adopting a definite military policy now, the association says:

"We believe it is impossible to secure the necessary man power for an army of occupation in Europe without the adoption of universal military training, provided we take it for granted the Administration does not intend to break its contract with the men now in the service by compelling them to serve an additional year or two years, until they can leisurely prepare for a new draft or some other scheme whereby these men may at some future day be relieved.

"A draft within the ranks of the men already in the service; a new draft of men outside of the service, or universal military training are the only solutions we can see, and since the Administration has persistently refused to make any preparation or plan for a force, which we all knew some time ago would be needed, their excuse will be that a new draft army or a citizen army through a system of universal military training, cannot possibly be realized in time, and for the reason, that the men are already trained and in Europe will have to be used or else we would be unable to carry out our full duty under the terms of the treaty of peace, which is unthinkable.

"We are just as wretchedly unprepared in trained man power today as we were at the beginning of the war, unless the

FORESEES RATE REDUCTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The annual report of W. G. McAdoo, Director General of Railroads, as made public today, summed up all the activities undertaken by the Railroad Administration during the war. Among the topics on which Mr. McAdoo reported were the abandonment of competition, the consolidation of ticket offices, the elimination of unnecessary passenger trains, the consolidation of terminals, the abridgment of time tables and curtailment of advertising, the shortening of freight routes, the training of ticket clerks, the dining car service, improved passenger service, baggage and the consolidation and simplification of tariffs.

"It should, I think, be borne clearly in mind that whatever inconvenience the travelling and shipping public have suffered during the past twelve months of Government operation has been due to the absolute necessity of first devoting our transportation agencies to the vigorous and successful prosecution of the war," said Mr. McAdoo in conclusion.

"Only that part of the motive power and freight and passenger equipment remaining after our troops had been moved to cantonments or from cantonments overseas and supplied with all the necessaries of life and war could be devoted to the commercial traffic of the country. The service rendered under such conditions cannot and ought not to be taken as the measure of what might be expected through Federal control under normal conditions and in time of peace. As a matter of fact, our inconveniences were luxuries as compared with the situation which existed in England or on the Continent.

"There remains a great deal of work which has been undertaken and is not yet completed, such as the unification of rules and practices covering the transportation of live stock; the preparation of a consolidated tariff governing the handling of perishable freight; the consolidation and modification of the demurrage, weighing and inspection bureaus in each of the three classification territories to the end that existing discrimination may be removed to the benefit of both the shipper and the carrier and uniformity in practice and rulings established.

Problem of Foreign Trade.

"One of the most important and fast developing traffic questions relates to the efficient and proper handling of import and particularly export traffic. There is every indication that the efforts of manufacturers and producers of the United States, with the assistance of our proposed merchant marine, will result in a much more successful invasion of foreign markets and a considerably greater volume of traffic than has heretofore sailed from our harbors. We are, therefore, giving immediate consideration to the rate situation, particularly between ports and producing points, unification of port practices and charges, and the elimination of undue competition between ports, with the thought in mind that each producing section shall have its proper standing and be given all the encouragement possible to develop traffic."

As an indication of the saving effected in eliminating unnecessary passenger trains, Mr. McAdoo said that during the first seven months of Federal control an aggregate of 21,000,000 miles a year were done away, with in the territory west of Chicago and the Mississippi River, while in the eastern district 26,420,000 miles were eliminated. Without this saving in motor power and equipment, he said, the millions of troops transported from one section of the country to another, often for long distances, could not have been handled with such signal success.

After telling of the consolidation of passenger terminals, Mr. McAdoo said that the same principle had been applied in the consolidation of freight terminals.

"The saving of switching costs that has resulted and the greater rapidity with which cars have been handled and loaded and unloaded are already apparent," he added. "The neck of the transportation bottle is the freight terminal, and if the promptness with which cars can be handled there is increased, the congestion, which has in the past so greatly reduced the carrying capacity of our entire railroad system, will be greatly relieved."

The estimated saving from the simplification and abridgment of time-tables and the restriction of advertising has amounted to $7,000,000, the report said. It said, however, that during the coming year, because of the changed conditions and the possible necessity of creating passenger travel, general, and particularly special advertising would, to a large extent, be resumed.

Material progress, the report said, has been made in the routing of freight, especially in the West, where the opportunities, because of the longer average hauls, are much greater than in the East. Not only have the carriers profited through the saving in car, train, and engine miles, but the shipping public has benefited because of the fact that the speedier handling via shorter routes has made more empty cars available than would otherwise have been the case.

Speaking of the co-ordination of the railroad service with the other war agencies of the Government, Mr. McAdoo said that representatives of the Division of Traffic, each bearing the title of Manager of Inland Traffic, were appointed to co-operate with and direct the traffic of the Food Administration, the Fuel Administration, the Oil Division of the Fuel Administration, the War and Navy Departments, the War Industries Board, and the United States Shipping Board.

"As a result of their work," continued Mr. McAdoo, "the prompt and, wherever necessary, preferred shipment of war supplies for the United States and its allies was made possible. Their complete and practical knowledge of the transportation systems of the country enabled them to direct shipments via the most efficient routes, thus speedily relieving the congestion that had previously existed, while at the same time, through a proper distribution of the traffic, they were able to arrange for its movement in solid and maximum trainloads, thereby insuring a uniform and constant flow."

Explains Advance in Rates.

In telling of the necessity for the advance in freight and passenger rates, Mr. McAdoo said that some criticism had been made as to the manner in which the order concerning these changes was issued, as well as to its method of application.

"These I believe to be the result of lack of knowledge of the complications surrounding the situation and its necessities," he declared. "It was only after the Federal Control act had been passed by Congress and approved by the President on March 21, 1918, that any steps could be taken to meet these constantly rising costs. To any one familiar with the rate fabric of the country and its application by means of literally hundreds of thousands of tariffs, containing millions of items, it was manifestly a physical impossibility to secure the advances by the substitution of new tariffs with corrected items in any period of less than several years.

"Our efforts, therefore, after conference with and by the generous aid of the Interstate Commerce Commission, were directed toward some plan which would not only increase all the rates within the shortest possible time, but also spread that increase as equitably and fairly as possible over the entire country. General Order 28 was the result, and experience has shown that it accomplished the end that had to be attained with the least possible disturbance of business conditions.

"Sufficient time has not yet elapsed to judge the final effect of these increases as related to the net operating income, but it is hoped that with the return to more nearly normal conditions reductions may gradually be made."

Among the modifications in charges and practices made by the freight department and which have accrued to the benefit of the public, Mr. McAdoo mentioned the following: The arrangement for a reduction in the freight charge on cattle feed moving into the drought-stricken districts of the Northwest and Southwest; the establishment at the request of the Food Administration of a storage-in-transit privilege on dressed meats, thereby enabling the packers lacking sufficient cold storage facilities at their plants to keep their products moving without congestion or delay toward the Atlantic seaboard for overseas movement; the reduction in manganese ore rates from Western mines to Eastern furnaces to replace Brazilian ores impossible of procurement because of the shortage of bottoms; the establishment of through rates on coal between points and in territories where they were not heretofore effective to the end that the Fuel Administration might the more readily carry out its plan for the economical and efficient distribution of this very essential commodity.

CHARLES WYNDHAM, ACTOR, DIES AT 81

First Took to Stage in America and Served as Surgeon in Our Civil War.

KNIGHTED BY KING EDWARD

With His Criterion Company, He Made Many Tours—Last Seen Here at Empire in 1909.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Sir Charles Wyndham, the actor, died here this morning.

Sir Charles Wyndham, one of the distinguished and interesting figures in the Anglo-American dramatic world, was linked to America by very close ties, for it was here that he went on the stage, his first appearance being at Mrs. John Wood's Olympic Theatre, on the east side of Broadway, near Houston Street, in January, 1861. He served in the civil war as surgeon, having studied medicine in England before he came to this country.

His first appearance on the London stage was made in 1865. Many times in later years he visited America, and he was almost as well known to the theatregoers of this country as he was in his native England. He was a favorite in society and received his knighthood from the late King Edward among the Coronation honors in 1902.

Born in Liverpool in 1837, Charles Wyndham was the son of a physician and was destined for the church when he displayed his predilection for the life of an actor. To appease his father he agreed to study medicine, and received his degree from Guy's Hospital, London. About this time he married Emma Silberrard, the granddaughter of a German baron.

He came to this country soon after graduation, quit medicine for the stage, but when the civil war broke out he enlisted in the United States Army. He was an earnest abolitionist and also was fond of adventure.

In the capacity of surgeon he was present at the engagements of Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, and Gettysburg, besides serving all through the Red River campaign under General Banks.

In 1863 he resigned from the service and went to Washington, where he joined the stock company of Leonard Grover, the manager of John Wilkes Booth, afterward the assassin of Lincoln. Sir Charles, having, as he thought, proved "a failure" on the stage, soon returned to England, where he continued to practice as a physician until his debut at the Royalty Theatre in 1865 as Christopher Carnation in "Carnation of Carnation Cottage." During 1867-68 he was at St. James's Theatre under the management of Louisa Herbert, (Mrs. Crabbe.)

When he reappeared in New York, at Wallack's Theatre in 1868, as Charles Surface in "The School for Scandal," he readily established a reputation as a light comedian. The following year he brought his own company, said to have been the first traveling organization in the United States to play short engagements in the regular theatres. He came again, each time with his own company, for the seasons of 1882-3, 1889-90, 1904-5, and 1909.

The repertory of his whole stage career would fill a column of fine print. "The School for Scandal" remained a trump card for many years. "Pink Dominos," which he produced in 1877, was a piece which he ran for more than 500 nights. "Uncle Sam," "Wild Oats" and "David Garrick" were conspicuous successes on both sides of the Atlantic.

For twenty years he successfully managed the Criterion Theatre in London, and he was also proprietor of Wyndham's Theatre and the New Theatre. His notable productions of recent years included "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Case of Rebellious Susan," "Rosemary," "Mrs. Dane's Defense," "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace," "Captain Drew on Leave," and "The Mollusc." In this last he appeared at the Empire Theatre in this city in 1909.

Sir Charles's first wife died in January, 1916, and in March of the same year he married Miss Mary Moore, who for thirty years had been leading actress in his company. At that time the actor-manager was 79 years old. Miss Moore had accompanied him on his American tours since 1885. She was the widow of James Albery, the dramatic author.

Wyndham's reputation as a versatile light comedian was made in London at the latter part of the Victorian period in plays like "Brighton" and "Fourteen Days," and his biggest success was in "David Garrick" at the Criterion, in which George Giddens, now playing in "Daddies," was a member of the cast.

With his fine stage presence, charm of voice and acting, Wyndham became a matinée idol for all the romantic young women who visited the British metropolis. He was also popular with the profession and the public as a witty after-dinner speaker, and was President of the Eccentric Club up to the time of his death.

During the last year or two Wyndham did not attend many functions on account of his loss of memory and deafness, and general failing health. In his latter years on the stage, he dropped the lighter comedies and produced plays like "Rosemary" and "The Mollusc," which were more suitable for his age. He was always ready to give his services for charitable performances and was Past President of the Royal Theatrical Fund and other professional organizations in London.

DEATH OF JOHN MASON.

Actor Famous on American Stage Expires Suddenly at Stamford.

John Mason, one of the best known actors on the American stage, died suddenly yesterday morning at Dr. A. J. Givens's Sanitarium, Stamford, Conn., where he had been under treatment for less than a week following a breakdown which he suffered at Providence, R. I., while giving the première of a new melodrama, "The Woman in Room 13," announced to be presented here Tuesday night. Bright's disease, with complications, was stated as the cause of Mr. Mason's death. He had been in declining health for several months. A. M. Woods, the theatrical manager, was in Stamford yesterday making arrangements for the funeral, which will be held in New York.

Mr. Mason was born in Orange, N. J., Oct. 28, 1858, the son of Daniel Gregory and Susan W. Belcher Mason, and a grandson of the musician, Dr. Lowell Mason. He was educated in private schools and at the Frankfort Gymnasium, and entered Columbia University in 1876. Two years later he began his stage career at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. He went to the Boston Museum from 1879 to 1889, with the exception of two seasons, when he was a member of A. M. Palmer's Union Square company in this city.

After the death of his mother, in 1890, Mr. Mason went to London and made a great success with Sir George Alexander at St. James's Theatre as Simeon Strong, in Haddon Chambers's play, "The Idler." Upon his return to America he starred for three years with Marion Manola, who later became his wife, and who was then a queen of comic opera. Mason was on the vaudeville stage with his wife for two years, and in 1896 returned to the legitimate drama, appearing first in London in his old part in "The Idler."

One of his best hits was in 1907 as Jack Brookfield in Augustus Thomas's play, "The Witching Hour," in which he appeared a total of 970 times. In "A Son of the People" he was invited to appear at the then New Theatre, now the Century, with his own company, in 1910.

His success in "The Witching Hour" was duplicated in a new play by Thomas, "As a Man Thinks," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, where it ran all through 1911 and opened the following season. A few years since he was seen in the rôle of the Judge in "Common Clay" at the Republic.

Mason acted last in New York in "The Big Chance" at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, leaving the cast a few weeks ago to rehearse for "The Woman in Room 13."

SUGGESTS JEWISH REFORMS

Dr. Kohn Declares Ideals of Returning Soldiers Must be Heeded.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 12.—Eight hundred Jews attending the Midwest Conference of the United Synagogue of America here today applauded Dr. Jacob Kohn of New York when he insisted the religious conduct of the synagogue must be changed to take care of the returning Jewish soldiers. This experience, Dr. Kohn said, had given the soldier a new religious viewpoint which he would demand of his church when he returned. He said the soldiers had fought for nationalism and new ideals, and declared:

"Bolshevism was merely one indication of the trend of events toward the new order. There are two mobs, one on the street in tatters, the other which rides in luxury. It is the duty of the synagogue to bring the two mobs together."

Dr. Abraham Kershman of Detroit said the synagogue should establish and maintain Jewish centres at the larger colleges and universities.

Rabbi Louis Feinberg of Cincinnati suggested that large employers of Jews change their work schedules providing a nine-hour day four days and one eight-hour day to give Jews Saturday and Sunday to worship.

U. S. ARMY PLANS OLYMPIC GAMES

21 NATIONS ARE INVITED

General Pershing Sends Personal Invitation to Commanders and Men of Allies to Enter Contests.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—A mammoth military Olympic meet to be held in Paris in May or June, under the auspices of the American Army, for athletes from all the allied fighting forces is projected in plans announced tonight. General Pershing, the American commander in chief, who is taking a keen interest in the plans, is sending a personal letter to the commanders of the armies of all nations with whom the United States has been associated during the war, inviting the officers and men to participate.

Twenty-one allied countries will be asked to take part, and it is planned that the games will surpass any other athletic competition ever conducted in the history of sports. The games will be financed entirely by the American Army in co-operation with the welfare agencies now operating with it.

The French Government and the French Army have given their approval of the plan and have promised their hearty co-operation.

General Pershing's letter of invitation to the French Army, which is a duplicate of those sent to the commanders of other armies, follows:

"The officers and men of the American Expeditionary Forces, being keenly appreciative of the splendid relations which exist among those who have borne arms in the great common cause, and which in the present instance have so happily developed into such deep feelings of mutual respect and admiration, are most anxious to preserve and strengthen this relationship in every way possible.

"Now that active military operations have ceased they believe that nothing could be more conducive to this end than to gather in friendly competition on the field of sport representatives of the armies of each of the nations which have so long been associated together in the stern struggle for the right.

"Accordingly they have decided to organize an interallied athletic meeting to be held in the Colombes Stadium, Paris, during the month of May or June, 1919, in which officers and men of all these armies shall be eligible to take part.

"As Commander in Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces, I have the honor, therefore, to invite through you, their Commander in Chief, the officers and men of the armies of France to participate in the contests and to express the earnest hope that many of them may do so, and that the ties of the much cherished spirit of comradeship which have sprung up from the gallant joint efforts of our forces on the battlefield may thus be even more closely cemented.

"Respectfully,

"JOHN J. PERSHING."

The plan involves large questions of organization, finance, and operation, and the American Army as host will assume responsibility in all matters of this kind. The actual operating unit probably will be a Games Committee, whose personnel will be selected by the chief athletic officer of the American Expeditionary Force, and the committee will be the responsible agency and the final authority on all matters pertaining to the games.

This committee will ask the various armies each to name two delegates to sit as members of an advisory council. The only cost to the allied armies participating will be that involved in training, transporting, equipping, and rationing their own competing athletes. These expenses, it is understood, each army prefers to carry.

Individual prizes already have been provided for and will be of artistic merit. It is probable that team trophies also will be presented.

The White Owls polo team registered its third consecutive victory in the Victory Cup tournament at Durland's Riding Academy yesterday, when it vanquished the Foxhunters by 14 goals to 7. The teams were playing on even terms, so that the final score represented actual goals.

The White Owls' offensive completely swept aside the comparatively weak efforts of the Foxhunters. In the first period the White Owls outplayed their rivals. The period ended after the ultimate winners had scored seven goals and the Foxhunters four.

In the second period the White Owls continued their effective offensive. Led by H. Winn the team scored goals in quick succession, and at the same time prevented the Foxhunters from compiling a dangerous number of goals. Winn, playing at No. 2, accounted for nine goals in the course of the game. M. Wilder, No. 1, for the victorious trio, scored four times.

The score was 31 to 15. The victorious team led throughout and scored in easy fashion. At the end of the first half the Morningside players were leading by 17 to 7.

S. Belsky and Farrant, guards, did the most effective work for the successful quintet. Farrant scored five field goals and Belsky registered four. In addition both players were effective in preventing many attempted scores by the Triangles.

GOOD SCORES AT TRAPS.

Dr. Culver Again Wins High Scratch Prize at Travers Island.

Dr. Culver was in excellent form at the Travers Island traps of the New York Athletic Club yesterday. Although it was cold and windy on the firing line, the doctor won the high scratch prize with the excellent total of 97 out of a possible 100 targets. On his way to the scratch prize he scored a leg on the Red Cross, the Accumulation, the Tournament, and the Byronel Cups. It was all that was possible for a gunner to do in an afternoon at Travers Island.

A. P. Walker was the high handicap gunner of the day. He took the prize on a shoot off from seven other gunners. All had full scores of 100 targets in the first time at the traps. Mr. Walker also was the winner of a special 25 "bird" event. He also scored a leg on the Byronel Cup, a 50-target event, that completed the regular program.

In addition to Dr. Culver six other nimrods scored legs on the Red Cross and the Accumulation Prizes. They were J. D. Bristol, M. McVoy, A. P. Bennett, R. R. Debacher, W. B. Short, and R. B. Cole. All had full cards of 25 targets. In the Tournament Cup race Dr. Culver had to share honors with M. McVoy, G. W. Derrick, W. P. Bennett, and R. R. Debacher.

Dr. Culver and A. P. Walker were not the only gunners to score in the shoot for the Byronel Cup. Full scores of 50 targets were also made by F. J. Ham, N. Webb, W. B. Ogden, J. D. Bristol, E. D. Anderson, A. P. Bennett, and A. W. Currie. Twenty-six gunners took part in the shoot.

COSTELLO IS FIRST HOME.

Defeats Field of Fifteen in Handicap Road Race.

Jack Costello of the Paulist A. C. showed the way to fifteen rivals yesterday in the weekly handicap road race of the Lower Manhattan Athletic League over the Paulist A. C.'s course of about three and one-half miles. Part of the race was contested through Central Park. Costello was making his first appearance in a year and was allowed a start of two minutes. His time at the finish was 18:36. He enjoyed an advantage of about a city block on J. Gottlieb, Clark House A. A.

Costello's victory was scored in comparatively easy fashion. He went to the head of the field when about half the distance had been covered. Up to this stage of the race the diminutive form of Buster Mountain of the Paulist A. C., who had the limit allowance of three minutes, showed in front. Mountain set a merry pace from the start, but weakened gradually, and after covering about a mile and three-quarters was passed by Costello. Thereafter Costello made the pace to his own liking until near the finish line, when Gottlieb challenged. The Clark House A. A. runner's bid for the leadership failed, for Costello increased his pace and drew away from the remainder of the field until he had worked up his advantage of about a city block. Mountain finished thirteenth.

Joe Giorgio of the Paulist A. C., former Pelham Bay sailor, was the honor man. Giorgio ran in good form from the start and finished in eleventh position. His time was 18:02, the fastest time recorded. This gives Giorgio his second fast time prize for as many races.

The team laurels fell to the lot of Clark House A. A. representatives. This club's harriers gathered in the low total of 20 points, against 29 for the Paulist A. C.

The order of finish follows:

Pos.	Name and Club.	Hdcp.	Actual Time.
1—	J. Costello, Paulist A. C.	2:00	18:36
2—	J. Gottlieb, Clark House A. A.	3:00	20:04

NOVICE WINS ROAD RUN.

Klaus Leads Home Big Field in St. Anselm's Race.

A handicap of five minutes, the limit allowed, aided John Klaus in a victory yesterday in his first attempt at road running. Klaus outdistanced a field of fourteen rival members of the St. Anselm's A. C. in a members' handicap chase of about four and one-half miles.

The winner, who has heretofore confined his athletic efforts to basket ball, took the leading position at the start and never relinquished his advantage. Klaus completed his journey in good condition and had an advantage of about 150 yards on the veteran Tim O'Connor, who finished second. Klaus's time was 24:08.

Joseph Losgar won the fast time prize. He started from scratch and finished sixth in 20:05.

The order of finish follows:

John Klaus, (5:00,) 24:08; T. O'Connor, (1:15,) 20:39; Harold Darby, (2:45,) 22:30; Charles Beagan, (2:45,) 22:48; Frank Huchko, (4:00,) 24:04; Joseph Losgar, (scratch,) 20:05; John Primoshle, (4:00,) 24:13; John Flatley, (2:45,) 23:05; Charles Lauth, (1:45,) 22:17; Stanley Bennett, (3:15,) 23:15; Arthur Levy, (2:15,) 23:09; Thomas De Flora, (2:45,) 23:41; A. Marquardt, (5:00,) 26:20; J. Shields, (5:00,) 26:25; J. Bachinor, (5:00,) 26:30.

MILOFSKY LEADS HARRIERS.

Is First Home in Handicap Run of L. I. A. L.

The initial handicap road race of the season for the Long Island Athletic League, held yesterday over the Swedish-American A. C.'s course of about five miles in Brooklyn, resulted in a victory for Louis Milofsky of the Kings County A. A. Milofsky started in a field of twenty-two harriers, with a handicap allowance of four minutes. He went to the head of the field about two miles after the start, and was never thereafter displaced. His actual time was 29:19.

The order of finish of the first ten follows:

L. Milofsky, Kings County A. A., (4:00,) 29:19; J. J. Heinsohn, Kings County A. A., (4:30,) 30:05; E. Hendrickson, Swedish-American A. C., (4:30,) 30:05; S. Moore, Brooklyn A. A., (4:00,) 30:17; J. Walsh, Swedish-American A. C., (4:00,) 31:05; J. Cohen, Brooklyn A. A., (scratch,) 27:30; W. Fredericks, Kings County A. A., (4:00,) 31:44; O. Pollack, Kings County A. A., (4:00,) 31:52; S. JOHNSON TO SEEK RELEASE OF PLAYERS

Will Confer with Officials in Effort to Get Men ouf of Army in Time for Season.

While the club owners and league officials are gathering here today for the preliminary meetings which will lead up to the joint baseball meeting of the major leagues Thursday, President Ban Johnson of the American League is preparing an appeal to the Government for the release of players in the army in time for the opening of the baseball season April 23.

Johnson will go to Washington today to confer with army officials upon the question of the early discharge of ball players still in the army, both here and abroad, so that the clubs may have the full strength of the men held on their reserve lists. In doing this he is acting in the same manner as the heads of large corporations and business houses who have petitioned for the release of men essential to their business.

The absence of many stars in the army and navy has been recognized as one of the handicaps to an otherwise big season. At the present time such men as Grover Cleveland Alexander, Hank Gowdy, Rabbit Maranville, and many of lesser prominence are in the service, and so far it has not been indicated when they will be discharged. It is not the intention of the baseball men to ask that their business be especially favored, but to seek the release of the players if the Government can see its way clear to release them.

The Boston Braves are counting heavily upon Hank Gowdy, not only for the strength he will add to the club, but for his power as a drawing card. Gowdy was the first ball player of the major leagues to enlist, and he has given an excellent account of himself. His presence would undoubtedly aid much in popularizing the Braves.

The Cincinnati club is holding up the appointment of a manager, owing to the absence of Christy Mathewson, who is still in France. The position has been held open for Matty, in the hope that he would return before the training season started. It will be necessary by that time to have a leader. The club officials have announced that they will not take any action until after the joint meeting here this week.

Several of the magnates have started for the baseball conclave. Fred Mitchell, President and manager of the Chicago Cubs, and Vice President William Veeck left Chicago for New York last night. At the same time, a party of minor league officials, headed by A. R. Tearney, Chairman of the Minor League Cimmittee, left for New York. The minor league officials will hold a meeting here tomorrow, at which they will form their plans for the meeting with the big leagues later in the week. Their demands have already been presented to the National Commission, and will be presented at the joint meeting by that body.

Baseball men regard the meetings here this week as the most important the game has held in many years. A new start will be made from these gatherings. This means that new relations will be established with the minor leagues, and that a new Chairman will, in all probability, be elected to the National Commission.

Much of the interest centres on the position of August Herrmann, for fifteen years Chairman of the commission. It is expected that he will resign from the position. The recent reorganization of the Cincinnati Club with Herrmann as one of the officers indicated his intention of remaining at the head of the club, and therefore resigning from the commission. It is quite certain he will not be permitted to hold both positions again.

As the baseball people gather rumors are already flying through the air. One is to the effect that Clarence Rowland, who was recently let out as manager of the Chicago White Sox, will be appointed manager of the Cincinnati Reds to succeed Christy Mathewson, should the latter be unable to resume the reins. Rowland is on his way to New York and will confer with Herrmann here.

Al Demaree, the pitcher, has loomed up as a candidate for a managerial position. He is reported under consideration for the management of the Milwaukee Club of the American Association.

WIN BEST-BALL MATCH.

Kitchen and Clark Defeat Galligan and Nye.

Amateur and professional golfers took part in a four-ball match at the Marine and Field Club yesterday afternoon. The result was that J. H. Kitchen and Jack Clark defeated L. A. Nye and Ted Galligan, the home pair, by 4 up and 2 to play. The winners had a best-ball of 74, to 78 for the other side.

After the first two holes were halved, Galligan won the third, but Kitchen squared accounts at the next. His side won the sixth, seventh, and eighth, and turned for home 2 up, when Galligan won the ninth. Five halved holes followed, and Kitchen and Clark became 3 up at the fifteenth. Kitchen almost got a 2 at the 240-yard sixteenth, but his 3 was good enough to win. They played the bye holes, Clark winning the seventeenth, while the home hole was halved. Clark had the best individual score, a 78, while Galligan had 79, Kitchen 81, and Nye 93. The best-ball card follows:

The Boys telling Velvet Joe how much they like his tobacco

You, too, will like Velvet tobacco. It's aged in nature's way, the slow way, the sure way, the expensive way, but the right way. Two years' ageing in wooden hogsheads makes Velvet cool, smooth and mild. A pipeful of Velvet will tell you—then you will tell others.

BUILDERS NOW ASK LENDERS TO REFORM

Material and Labor Stabilized, Trade Puts Challenge Up to Mortgage Men.

PRICES AT TRIAL LEVELS

What Investors May Expect in Construction Costs—Big Cuts Made—Mills Close.

Building material and equipment interests have taken the lending interests at their word in the matter of stabilizing prices and are putting the challenge back to them to reform their methods of making mortgage loans so that building can proceed.

When it became known to the building interests of the Eastern section of the country that they could not expect construction work to proceed until they stabilized their prices and showed some real signs of co-operating with the building investor to relieve the tension incident to lack of rentable space the American Radiator Company dropped its price at once 25 per cent., pipe-fitting interests dropped their prices 5 per cent., soil pipe interests are contemplating a radical drop, manufacturers of porcelain knobs dropped their prices from 5 to 25 per cent., and electric conduit manufacturers will shortly announce a price drop.

The American Brass Company has showed a drop of ¾ cents a pound on weatherproof wire, friction tapes are down 2 cents a pound, and the market on wrought brass butts is off 25 per cent. Linoleums have dropped from 5 to 25 per cent. In the tool department the Ames Shovel & Tool Company started the price dropping policy by a cut that ranged around 10 to 20 per cent.

The condition with regard to labor in the New York building situation is improving, the stabilized basis of 1918 instead of the sought-for 1919 base apparently proving acceptable to the men with modifications.

These modifications having been at the behest of the lending institutions, the building interests now put the challenge back to them and ask for the release of mortgage money so that building construction can accept the new base price offered and give the men employment. The best opinion in the trade is that the lending companies adopt the amortized mortgage system, insist upon a 25 per cent. instead of the usual 10 to 15 per cent. upset equity of the borrower, and upon a $1,000,000 investment for each million dollars of value, but by applying the principle of amortization gradually reduce the amount of excess loan to meet the assured lowering of wartime construction prices as the period of reconstruction unfolds itself.

This would eliminate the "shoe-stringer," it would stabilize the construction market, prevent overproduction, and at the same time tend to relieve the "high cost of living," that keeps wages high. The Federal Government backed by Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor, is committed to a policy of liberal construction, and that is understood in the trade to mean that with everything else ready for a great construction period, including general price reductions on heretofore excessively costly equipments and materials, money also should be made as free.

Under this plan the borrower on a million dollar operation three years ago, under the present permanent loan plan of making mortgage loans on buildings, would be told that although the cost today would be a million dollars, the lender would consider the cost equal to that of the same type of building erected five years ago, which would be around $700,000. Therefore 70 per cent. of that cost would be $420,000, representing a permanent loan which is standing paid off.

Under the amortization plan the loan would be made on the full value of a million dollars, which would represent a $600,000 loan which, in the course of five years, when it is expected that building costs will approximate normal, the lending interest would have his loan reduced to the basis upon which he normally would have made the engagement.

Lending institutions, when asked their attitude upon this plan, which has the full indorsement of the most prominent members of the Building Trades Employers' Association, most of the members of the American Institute of Architects, practically all of the building material manufacturing and distributing associations, as well as many of the most prominent building investors, returned the statement that the Federal authorities expect them not to make building commitments until after the next Loan drive is over in May. Secretary Wilson at Washington, co-operating with Roger W. Babson and Franklin T. Miller, in an attempt to start at once a nation-wide building revival, replies by saying:

"Inasmuch as the building industry is regarded by many as the means of facilitating the general industrial transition to a peace basis, it should have the encouragement of all interests. * * * Public construction will be helpful in mitigating conditions, therefore it is evident that private as well as public construction must be resumed before the country returns to normal conditions.

"Next to placing private funds in Government securities, it is desirable that they be invested in enduring wealth, like construction. The accumulated earnings of the country should not be diverted into forms of wealth easily consumed and without earning power. Permanent investments of wealth will stabilize the moral and financial conditions of a nation as a whole as well as benefit the individual investor and his dependents. To bring this about all factors interested in construction must co-operate."

The need of immediate action to prevent disastrous results to a great many building material interests is best proved by the fact that absolute strangulation of demand has already resulted in the almost complete closing down of the eastern Portland cement industry.

The brick situation is so acute as to be causing much worry among manufacturers along the Raritan and Hudson Rivers, all of which plants are closed, not only for the Winter, but will probably defer opening until late in the Spring. Lime, plaster, and other basic commodities are also closing, or running at greatly reduced capacities. The price drops, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports, are, frankly, merely bids for business. There may be slightly additional price modifications—they will be acts of desperation, not mere baiting of the building investor.

The drop is there to be accepted. If it is not accepted, extreme scarcity of materials and equipments when the Spring movement gets under way will force prices to levels that will make the present ones look puny. The market needs support. Lacking it, builders will have to take their chance on supply.

Many Interested in Americanization Movement at Reception.

More than 300 prominent representatives of interests actively interested in the progress of the Americanization movement in this country, and in this locality particularly, attended a reception yesterday afternoon to Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, and to represenatives of the various racial groups and the Committee of Racial Advisers of the Americanization Division of the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, in the home of Mrs. David Rumsey, 2 Washington Square North.

Secretary Lane spoke briefly to the gathering, which was called primarily to give the Secretary a chance to meet leaders of the foreign-language groups and the editors of the local foreign-language press. He expressed the hope that Congress might do its share in the Americanization work by appropriating more money for educational purposes—for the Bureau of Education—than it does at present.

Oberoutcheff of the Russian Army, Judge Otto H. Rosalsky, Charles W. Bowring, Major Brooman White of the British Army; many editors of the local foreign-language papers, and the following racial advisers of the bureau: Professor Alex Petrunkevitch of Yale, representing the Russian group; A. FRAME NEW LABOR LAWS.

Federation Prepares Program to Present to Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—What promises to be one of the most important labor programs ever presented to the State Legislature will be decided upon next Thursday at a conference of labor leaders to be held here under the auspices of the Reconstruction Committee of the State Federation of Labor. John Mitchell, Chairman of the committee, will preside.

Sub-committees have been at work on features of the program, and their reports will be submitted for action. One sub-committee has been at work for several weeks on a health program, and drastic changes in the present law affecting the health of workers will be recommended. One recommendation is that a cash benefit, not to exceed $8 a week, be given to workers temporarily disabled by accident, and whose status is not covered by the present workmen's compensation law.

The health program also provides for medical, surgical, and dental work, the establishment of maternity benefits, and a burial fund of $100 for each person. The plan provides for an equal distribution of the cost between the workers and employers with the administration left in the hands of the State Industrial Commission.

Another feature of the proposed plan is that employes may be insured without having to undergo a physical examination, while still another is that when an employe has been disabled or when he is ill he may choose his own physician instead of having a physician designated by the Industrial Commission or the employer, as is now provided.

The provisions of the proposed program relating to the health of women employes provides for a minimum wage and an eight-hour day. The present labor laws are also redrawn to include women office workers, and elevator operators, as well as those engaged in transportation service.

Labor leaders are relying upon the active co-operation of Governor Smith to put their program through.

WAR MATERIAL FOR ROADS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The Department of Agriculture is exerting efforts to secure from the War Department all available material not needed for war purposes, and which can be used immediately in improving the nation's highways. Senator Bankhead, Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, will call up in the Senate tomorrow a resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to turn over to the Department of Agriculture any material he can spare.

If the measure is successful in Congress, hundreds of motor trucks, automobiles, mules, horses, &c., which have been purchased for war purposes will soon be used in building roads all over the country. The plan is to distribute the material throughout the various States. It is expected that thousands of discharged soldiers, especially of the Engineer Corps, will be employed in the road building.

Objection has been made in the Senate to immediate consideration of the measure, for, when Senator Bankhead called it up ten days ago, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, made the point that the war property should not be disturbed until the peace treaty had been signed. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts suggested that, as there was a proposition to purchase and improve training fields and cantonments, the material should be held for a while.

But adherents of the measure are calling attention to the fact that, even now, army mules are being sold on a sacrifice. At Camp Meade, last Tuesday, 650 army horses and mules brought prices as low as $40 in some instances, and the top scale was $115. The day afterward, at Fort Worth, 250 artillery and cavalry horses brought an average of $75, although the artillery horses cost $190 each and the cavalry mounts $165.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Foreign Trade Fields Being Surveyed.

A number of business men, representing large producing and manufacturing interests, have gone to Europe in the last fortnight and more are planning to go in the near future to study the market for American goods. Agents of banking houses and exporting firms are abroad looking over the ground for the renewal of old trade relations as soon as conditions are ripe and arrangements for an expansion of commerce under peace conditions may be made. While these visits are being carried out, the steel, copper, textile, and other industries are waiting for buying to expand at home, and they are watching for the earliest indications of a renewal of buying from abroad. It is needless to state that the early future of business activity in the United States is wrapped about by the possibilities of sales outside the country, and in this connection arises the question of the proper and adequate financing of exports. The French importer of American goods at the present time is under the necessity of paying a premium of about 5 per cent. on New York drafts; that is, he must pay a premium on his remittance of the purchase price over and above the cost of his goods and transportation charges. The Italian importer has a considerably heavier burden because of the existing exchange ratio, and great inequalities of exchange rates in other countries surround the current conduct of foreign commerce with numerous difficulties. In the main the major burden on former large customers of the United States is the result of vast changes in the movement of goods which resulted from the war and gave to this country a tremendous trade balance. It is generally realized by bankers that if sales of our goods abroad are to be increased in places where exchange rates are against the potential buyers measures must be taken to relieve the situation, and this can best be done through the extension of credits here. In some quarters it is believed to be a question whether current prices are more of a deterrent to export sales than the high cost to which the foreign importer would be put in paying for his purchases. Should the present period of light business in the export market be protracted it would be a natural thing to expect prices to move down, and it is for the purpose of forestalling such declines that business men are going abroad to see what may be done to stimulate buying across the seas. The necessity for expanding foreign commerce is one of the factors which is stimulating the interest of American bankers in the sale of foreign securities, Government and corporation, in the United States. They desire to have loans from abroad placed here as soon as the way may be paved for them, and it is expected that in the near future negotiations will come to light directed toward the flotation of new foreign paper in this country.

During last week enough details of the efforts toward forming a plan for the railroads came to light to show that on several important items railroad security owners and railroad managers are in agreement. The fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission went on record as opposing the five-year extension of Government control supplied fresh and important data on the attitude of railroad authorities toward measures to be used in returning the carriers to their owners. A vast amount of work must be done, of course, before any comprehensive program is outlined, and the promise is held forth that shippers will have considerable to say, but encouragement lay in the exchange of opinions which went on before the Senate committee. Walker D. Hines assumes the mantle of Mr. McAdoo as Director General, and all indications at the present time are that he will continue the policy of his predecessor. The inference to be drawn is that the debate over the disposal of the railroad question will continue along the lines so far followed, which will afford opportunity for the public to be heard before Congress gets far along in its deliberations over the railroad situation.

The conventional belief in the security markets is that prices discount positive industrial and financial occurrences at least six months in advance. If this may be taken as unfailing, stocks and bonds may be said to be unready as yet to forecast important developments under peace conditions. Last week the tendency of prices for stocks was slightly downward, while bonds did very little of anything. The decline of Steel common to the lowest point in several months appeared to be the result in part of the decline of 750,000 tons in unfilled orders reported as of Dec. 31, yet the recession of this issue and contemporary stocks in the metal field was hardly rapid enough to display any pronounced apprehension over the outlook for business. The announced purpose of certain copper concerns to limit output until signs of an increased demand appear would at other times probably have caused sharp recessions in the copper stocks, but as a matter of fact the week's downward movement was moderate. The effect of factors which in other years would have been depressing appears to be eased at the present time by the strong cash position of many industrial concerns and also by the inability of market followers to size up the possible result of many extraordinary happenings at home and abroad. The disorder which has reigned at Berlin and the fears expressed in allied countries over the spread of Bolshevism might be expected to influence the security markets because of their possible addition of complications to the return to normal life in Europe, and yet the markets have not seemed to pay much attention to these developments. The economic problems involved have thus far appeared of less import than those which grew directly out of the war, and it remains for the future to tell whether they will have any prolonged influence on the business and trade of the United States.

The investment demand for securities returning a high yield, backed by good assets and earning power, continues without evident signs of exception. The $65,000,000 telephone bonds and notes issued last week were quickly absorbed, and the easing of money rates paved the way for further offerings. Information that some of the railroads were getting accommodation from the War Finance Corporation indicated that a smaller demand in the way of railroad loans would come upon the public than bankers had expected recently.

RETURN OF LINES URGED BY MACKAY

Tells Representative Moon the Postal Will Waive Demand for Compensation.

Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, made public yesterday copies of a letter which he wrote to Representative John A. Moon, Chairman of the House Committee on Post Office and Roads, which has under consideration the resolution offered by Mr. Moon for eventual Government ownership of the telegraphs. The letter was in reply to one written by Chairman Moon requesting Mr. Mackay to explain his views on Federal wire control. This is the letter:

The Hon. John A. Moon, Chairman Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Your letter of Dec. 16, with inclosures, would have received my attention before this had it not been that I was having put into pamphlet form an article, which I wrote for publication, which embodies my views on the subject of Government ownership, and I inclose such reprint herewith. As I would judge that the proposed joint resolution now under consideration by your committee has Government ownership of the telegraphs and telephones for its ultimate object, I think that the information contained in my article gives ample reasons why the resolution should not be reported.

Regarding the proposition contained in the resolution that the telephone and telegraph systems be retained under the control of the postal system until otherwise ordered by Congress, I would respectfully submit that now that the purposes for which Congress enacted the joint resolution of July 16, 1918, namely, for the "national security or defense," have ceased to exist, the telegraph and telephone lines should be immediately returned to their owners, particularly as the Government, at least in the case of the operation of the lines of the Western Union Telegraph Company, will probably show a loss of several millions of dollars for the year ending July 31, 1919, under the award of compensation made by the Postmaster General to the Western Union Telegraph Company.

On Nov. 11, 1918, in a letter to Postmaster General Burleson, I suggested that he return the telegraph lines of both companies to the owners, under the authority given him in the President's proclamation of July 22, 1918, and that in such an event the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company would be willing to waive any claims for compensation and accept what the lines have actually earned since the beginning of Federal control, and I now repeat that offer. I am, yours very truly,

CLARENCE H. MACKAY, President.

"Since writing this letter," said Mr. Mackay, "Judge Hand has decided that the power to award compensation cannot be delegated to Mr. Burleson. It would seem to follow from this that the awards already made are void, including those made to the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, as well as those to the Western Union and Bell Telephone, and independent telephone companies."

The article which Mr. Mackay referred to was written by him for THE NEW YORK TIMES SUNDAY MAGAZINE and appeared several weeks ago. In it, Mr. Mackay expressed himself as unalterably opposed to Federal ownership, and cited the expensive experiments of the British Government in conducting the wire systems of the British Empire.

WORLD'S WAR DEBT REACHES VAST SUM

GERMANY'S HUGE BURDEN

Represents a Mortgage of 50% of the National Wealth — Bank Studies War's Financial Problems.

The total indebtedness of the seven great nations which were chiefly engaged in carrying forward the great war increased in four years from $27,000,000,000 to more than $194,000,000,000, according to a statement issued by the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, while the total indebtedness of the nations of the world has increased to more than $200,000,000,000. The bank's compilations show that Great Britain and Germany have the heaviest debts of any of the belligerents, that France comes third, and Austria-Hungary, Russia, the United States, and Italy follow in order.

The Mechanics and Metals National Bank has made a study of the war obligations of Europe and the United States, and will shortly publish a book entitled "The World's War Debt."

According to the bank's estimate the securities now outstanding against the seven chief nations which were in conflict are greater than the developed wealth of any single nation of the world other than the United States. These securities represent a sum six times as large as all of the bank deposits of the United States, twelve times as large as all gold and silver mined since the beginning of the world, and twenty times as large as the value of the annual foreign trade of this country.

In the middle of 1914 the indebtedness of Great Britain represented a mortgage equal to 4 per cent. of the nation's wealth. Great Britain's indebtedness at present is equal to a mortgage of more than 44 per cent. of that wealth. Germany's present indebtedness represents a mortgage of nearly 50 per cent. of the national wealth. In 1914 Germany's indebtedness was equal to a mortgage of only 6 per cent. of that wealth. The increase for Austria-Hungary has been to 60 per cent. of her wealth, France and Russia to 45 per cent., and the United States to 9 per cent.

Gross Debt of	Aug. 1, 1914.	Jan. 1, 1919.
United States..	$1,000,000,000	$21,000,000,000
Great Britain..	3,500,000,000	40,000,000,000
France	6,500,000,000	30,000,000,000
Russia	4,000,000,000	27,000,000,000
Italy	2,800,000,000	12,000,000,000
Entente nations	$18,400,000,000	$130,000,000,000
German Emp. & States	$6,200,000,000	$40,000,000,000
Austria-Hungary	3,700,000,000	24,000,000,000
Teutonic nations	$9,900,000,000	$64,000,000,000
Gross debt, all..	$27,300,000,000	$194,000,000,000

In discussing these a statement by the bank says: "Vast as the above figures are, the debt obligations of the nations will not end even here. A gross total of $194,000,000,000 for the countries given acknowledges only the war indebtedness, as added to the indebtedness of 1914. It makes no allowance for obligations to be incurred for further military purposes, for the demobilising of armies or for pensioning them. Nor does it allow for the restoration and replenishment expenditures that will impose upon the nations the duty to incur further loans. There will be, besides the expense of demobilising the armies, the work of rebuilding and restoring, of housing on an unparalleled scale and road making. There will be the imperative need of agricultural development, shipbuilding, and improvement of transportation, to say nothing of schemes of economic and social reform that are regarded as absolutely essential to future national efficiency.

"Increasing the wealth of nations and preparing carefully drawn tax plans will eventually bring about the wiping out of war debts. In the century following the battle of Waterloo the British nation gained vastly in prosperity, although its debt was larger than ever before. In similar fashion it can be shown how the wealth of France increased in the face of war. Notwithstanding the blows to her prosperity dealt by the revolution of 1789, the Napoleonic period, the revolution of 1848, and the Prussian war of 1870, industry and accumulation went on in France so that, compared with 1789, the wealth of the country up to the opening of the great war had increased more than eightfold.

"The determining factor of the whole matter in the future will after all lie not so much in the bulk of indebtedness as in the productive power of the people to support that indebtedness. Depending upon the wealth production of the people, the support of the war debts will be governed accordingly, and debts will be wiped out not by any repudiation or conscription but by encouraging industry, trade, commerce, and economic activity of every kind."

Loan Campaign Next April.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Opening of the Fifth Liberty Loan campaign April 6, the second anniversary of the declaration of war against Germany, is under consideration by Treasury officials, but no decision has been reached. The Third Liberty Loan drive started on April 6, 1918, the first anniversary.

It is planned to have the campaign run for three weeks, and to ask for between five and six billion dollars. Whether the interest rate will be higher than the 4¼ per cent. borne by the last issues depends partly on the movement of the market price of Liberty bonds in the next two months. The bonds will be of short maturity—about five years.

Advertising posters for the Fifth Loan have been partly chosen, and organizers are already making preliminary plans for sales campaigns. Motion pictures and public speakers will be used extensively.

SHIPPERS REQUEST RATE AMENDMENTS

Brief Filed with Senate by Thorne Criticises McAdoo's Control of Railroads.

SEES TIME NOW FOR CHANGE

Congress Asked to Restore Powers of Courts and Commissions Over Common Carriers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. — Clifford Thorne of Iowa, author of the Iowa law creating the office of Commerce Counsel as an advocate for the public in cases brought before State and Interstate Commerce Commissions, the first of its kind in the United States, has filed with the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, now considering the railroad situation, an appeal for the restoration of the suspension powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The statement submitted by Mr. Thorne is also signed by C. D. Chamberlin and Fayette B. Dow and was presented on behalf of the National Live Stock Shippers League, the Corn Belt Meat Producers' Association, the Illinois Live Stock Shippers' Association, the Western Petroleum Refiners' Association, the American Petroleum League, the National Petroleum Association, and the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Elevators Association.

"We do not believe it possible for you to determine the ultimate disposition of the railroads during the present session of Congress," says the statement. "But there is legislation of paramount importance which we believe can be, and should be, effected at once.

"In order to concentrate attention on this matter, which we deem of very great consequence and can and should receive your immediate consideration, we shall refrain from discussing at this time the more complicated problem as to the ultimate disposition of the railroads.

"We suggest that Congress should immediately restore the full jurisdiction and powers of the courts and commissions over our common carriers.

Criticises One-Man Power.

"During the war there may have been some necessity for the alleged subordination of the Supreme Court of the United States, State courts, Congress, State Legislatures, and the Interstate Commerce Commission to the will of the one man who happens to be Director of Railroads, but that emergency has now passed.

"We do not concede that such a subordination of the judicial and legislative branches of our Government to one man occupying an administrative or legislative position is constitutional or was intended by Congress, and yet the fact remains that the Director General has so interpreted the law in actual practice, and he is now proposing to do so in the future.

"Test cases are being carried to the Supreme Court that will finally determine the validity of such orders, but that will consume many months. In the meantime, we earnestly implore Congress to clarify the situation by making a few changes in the phraseology of the railroad control law.

"During the last year we have not had 'Government operation of railroads'; it might be described more accurately as a taste of 'railroad operation of the Government.' We do not say this with the slightest spirit of hostility or ill-will. We simply state a fact.

"It is correct to say that the railroads have not had their wishes as to some phases of the contracts or the purchase of railway supplies, &c. But as to operation Mr. McAdoo has delegated practically the whole problem to a staff composed almost entirely of railroad men. Numerous sub-committees have been created in different cities all over the country to hear complaints from shippers about service or rates and to make recommendations to the Washington staff as to what should be done. Without one exception, to our knowledge, the majority of every one of these committees, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, are railroad men.

"This has presented one long, splendid opportunity to put over things for which the railroads have been fighting.

Exclusion of Shippers.

"We do not criticise or question to the slightest degree the integrity or ability of Mr. McAdoo, but we think he was extremely unfortunate in not giving an equal representation to shippers and railroaders on every committee and tribunal he created. The Administration has rendered many orders that have been of great value. This has been especially true as to rates that would develop new business and as to orders that affect the movements of certain commodities in certain portions of the country. The Administration has been prompt to make a large number of rate revisions that restored the rate relationships existing prior to June 25. In this work the Administration officials have shown uniform courtesy to the shippers and have exhibited a broad-minded attitude and spirit of fairness worthy of great praise.

"On the other hand, many orders have been issued that are arbitrary and unjust without granting any opportunity whatever to those concerned to have a hearing before a disinterested tribunal before the order became effective.

"The United States Railroad Administration has attempted to repeal an act of Congress, the statutes and Constitutions of various States, and it has reversed decisions of State and Federal courts and commissions.

"At the present moment the Railroad Administration has under consideration several sweeping revolutionary changes in rates that are serving as a constant menace to industry, and that will disturb existing rate relationships upon which business has been built up during the last generation.

"We will give concrete examples demonstrating the accuracy of these statements. General Order 27, dated Nov. 26, 1918, directs that claims for loss of bulk grain will be recognised only where there is 'evidence of negligence on the part of the carrier. This is in direct conflict with the common law, as established in the decisions of the courts of last resort in both State and nation.

"General Order 18 attempts to prescribe the venue of jurisdiction of the courts, both State and Federal. In effect it repeals a part of an act of Congress, one of the provisions in the well-known Carmack amendment to the Interstate Commerce act. This is true whenever the claimant does not reside within the jurisdiction of the court where the shipment originated. Some municipal and district courts have held this attempt of an administrative tribunal to repeal an act of Congress and to limit the jurisdiction of our courts is invalid. But Judge Trieber of St. Louis of the Federal bench has recently sustained the order.

New Class Scale Rates.

"The Railroad Administration is now considering the advisability of initiating an entirely new set of class scale rates, based solely on distance, which shall supplant existing class scales throughout three-fourths of the United States, disturbing, in a wholesale manner, rate relationships upon which business has been established. Commenting on this, Chairman Daniels of the commission has written to the Director a letter, in which he states: 'The substitution of distance as a basis for the class rate scales in these territories would generally and materially alter the long-established relationship of rates to and from competing places.' When business has been so greatly disturbed and the future is so problematical, this is a most unfortunate time to hold over American industry threats of further revolutionary changes of this nature.

"The Railroad Administration has just proposed another advance on grain traffic from Chicago, Peoria, St. Louis, and related points to Eastern terminals, affecting both the local and reshipping rail rates.

"The administration has to a large extent eliminated the tracing of cars by shippers, as before the war, even though the shipper owns the car.

"The administration has recently proposed an increase in the charges for intra-plant switching ranging from 30 to 300 per cent. in amount. All this is in addition to the 25 per cent. ordered last June.

"Many other advances and changes of a similar character are under consideration. The administration has recently announced the policy of granting hearings. That is a step in the right direction, but it is utterly insufficient. If John Smith wants a thousand dollars that belongs to me, I want a hearing before some other person than John Smith before he gets the thousand.

"During the next few months it is probably more important, ten times over, than at any time at the present that the shippers of the country shall have an opportunity to be heard before a disinterested tribunal prior to the time when changes in rates, rules, and regulations shall become effective. Realizing the termination in the near future of the so-called Government operation, the railway companies, in complete control of the machinery of the Railroad Administration, will attempt to establish those propositions which they want. Many of these propositions will be contrary to sound public policy, and it will take years to eliminate them. If the shipper is denied a rate reduction before there is a hearing, the railroads should not have a rate advance before a hearing. It is a poor rule that don't work both ways.

Legislation Recommended.

"For these reasons, we earnestly recommend the immediate adoption by the present Congress of the following amendments to the railroad control law:

"1. The restoration of the suspension powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"2. Strike out from the railroad control law the clause which states that the orders of the President may supersede the common law and the statutes of the State and Federal Governments. (This is contained in Section 10 of the law.)

"3. Insert the provision requiring the Director General to pay final judgments rendered against common carriers. (The present law exempts the property of the carrier from the levy of mesne or final process.)

"The essential purpose sought to be accomplished in placing the railroads under Federal control was to secure adequate transportation under war conditions through unified operation, thus securing an elimination of conflicting operating regulations, to which the carriers were subject at the time. It is no doubt true that a continued improvement of service can be secured through a further development of the operating plans which have been commenced under Federal control. Nothing we suggest here is intended to militate against that effort. What we seek to accomplish is merely such a change in the statutes as will restore the full effectiveness of the act to regulate commerce and the common law between the shippers and the railroads under normal conditions, now that the great war emergency has been passed."

TO TALK ON INCOME TAX.

Collector Elsner Expects a Class of 500 at N. Y. U.

Mark Elsner, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third New York District, will repeat his course on the Federal income tax at the New York University School of Commerce next term, which begins in February, he announced yesterday. The course last term was attended by about 250 business men, accountants, lawyers, and others, and Mr. Elsner expects at least 500 persons will compose the next class.

"Because it is generally ignorant of taxation and tax accounting the public must be educated concerning the subject of tax administration," Mr. Elsner said. "The changes in the income and excess profits taxes which will become effective this year will be radical. The new inheritance tax alters entirely the tax formerly known as the estate tax, and these changes must be understood and taken into account at every turn.

"I believe the Internal Revenue Bureau hereafter will be the largest individual bureau in the United States. The income tax will be of greatest importance to accountants everywhere. For the next ten years at least, income tax accounting will be the most important work of the accountant."

FAVORS COAL CO-OPERATION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The establishment of an export coal association under the Webb-Pomerene law, open to all bituminous coal exporters in the United States and designed to work as a medium through which the country's foreign trade in bituminous coal may be handled, is recommended in a report by the Foreign Trade Committee of the National Coal Association. It is understood that the proposal has met with the favor of leading bituminous coal exporters of the United States, and a meeting will be held at New York within ten days to discuss plans.

"All Europe is in the throes of a coal shortage," says the report. "Italy, France, Holland, Belgium, and other countries affected are purchasing, or about to purchase, a coal supply through their various governmental missions. All these markets are crying for American coal. It has been deemed expedient that exporters should unite to prevent duplication of shipment and other practices which would be unavoidable under the old competitive system. Provision for such unified action is made in the Webb-Pomerene law, which permits exporters in any given line to concentrate their efforts on foreign markets.

"The problem of supplying at the present time American coal where it is most needed abroad is almost wholly one of obtaining the necessary vessel tonnage. Indications are that in the near future an increasing number of vessels will be available for the transportation of this tonnage. The desire to use economically whatever ocean transportation is available, coupled with the desire to maintain in foreign markets a high standard of product, is another factor upon which the recommendations that an export association be formed are based."

POSTAL DEPOSITS RISE.

Manhattan and Bronx Report Increase of $6,253,209 for Year.

Postmaster Patten has received from the various stations of the New York Post Office in Manhattan and the Bronx postal savings statistics covering the calendar year 1918. These show the net amount remaining to the credit of depositors increased $6,253,209. The sum on deposit at the close of business Dec. 31 was $36,138,861. In December alone the amount deposited exceeded the withdrawals by $994,648.

The increase in the year is regarded by the postal authorities as remarkable, for throughout this period the city was being canvassed for the sale of Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps. Of the latter $14,772,882 worth was sold through the New York Post Office. There are now more than 149,000 depositors in Manhattan and the Bronx.

For Centralized Port Authority.

The Board of Trustees of the City Club has passed a resolution urging that in view of the fact that there are many plans of port development now being agitated and no central authority to deal with them, there should be created a Port Authority for the Port of New York with complete jurisdiction and authority in all matters now devolving upon the States of New York and New Jersey with power to acquire, own, and operate such port facilities as may be advisable, including railroad connections and terminals. The resolution called the tentative treaty offered by the New York and New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission practicable provided it was enacted promptly by the Legislatures of the two States and recommended that the commission press its efforts until a Port Authority is constituted to replace it.

State Insurance Appointment.

Jesse S. Phillips, State Superintendent of Insurance, announces the appointment of William Leslie as actuary in charge of the Workmen's Compensation Rate Bureau of the New York Insurance Department, to succeed Harwood E. Ryan, resigned. Mr. Leslie has been for the last four years actuary and secretary of the State Compensation Insurance Fund of California, prior to which he was for some time connected with the Reliance Life Insurance Company of Pittsburgh. He is a graduate of the University of California. He will take up his new duties about Feb. 15.

Immigration at a Low Mark.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Immigration almost ceased during the war. Statistics announced today by the Bureau of Immigration shewed that from April 1, 1917, to Sept. 30, 1918, a total of 178,362 immigrants arrived in the United States and that 123,676 departed.

MILK DEALERS DENY COMPROMISE OFFER

Will Pay No More Than $3.60 for January, Says Conference Board Secretary.

RECEIPTS UP SOMEWHAT

Dairymen's League Head Contradicts Distributers' Reports of Shipments to City.

The New York Milk Conference Board denied yesterday that the distributers had indicated to the Governor's Milk Commission, as announced by Chairman Robert E. Dowling on Saturday, a willingness to pay more than their original offer of $3.60 a hundred pounds for January milk, provided the Dairymen's League, which is holding out for $4.01, would make similar concession.

Chairman Dowling said last night that no formal proposal had come from the distributers, but he had got the impression from the distributer members of the Milk Commission that they would consider, in the interest of the public good, a higher price for January in order to have the controversy ended, if a like spirit were shown by the producers. There will be another meeting of the commission at noon today in the office of Mr. Dowling, 165 Broadway.

Milk receipts yesterday, according to Health Commissioner Copeland, amounted to 1,360,000 quarts, an increase of 87,719 quarts over Saturday, but 87,148 quarts under the receipts for Friday, which was the banner day since the strike went into effect. These figures, said Dr. Copeland, represent the supply available for New York City yesterday and do not include shipments that were received for New Jersey and other nearby cities.

Inspectors of the Department were particularly active yesterday, Dr. Copeland said, to see that all the milk received in the city meets the department's requirements. He estimated that 80 per cent. of the normal supply of milk is being received in the city daily.

I. Elkin Nathans, Secretary of the New York Milk Conference Board, issued this statement yesterday:

"The announcement in today's newspapers that the buyers of milk were prepared to increase their offer of $3.00 for January, provided the producers were willing to make some concessions, and not insist upon $4.01 per hundred pounds, is likely to be misinterpreted by the producers. The buyers have not made any offer and will make none higher than $3.00 for January.

"This position is based upon sound business considerations, the reasons for which have been so clearly set forth from time to time. These considerations are that the amount of milk in the market does not warrant a higher price than has been offered and that the producers in all other territories are voluntarily selling their milk at less than New York buyers have offered.

"So far as the general situation is concerned, it is still in the same satisfactory condition. We are daily increasing the supply received from normal sources as well as the quantity of milk being brought in from the outside to make up the deficiency in the supply. With the resumption of the ferries again to the Jersey shores, the inconvenience of the last several days, has tended to relieve the situation materially."

On the other hand, R. D. Cooper, President of the Dairymen's League, said:

"The milk situation is improving rapidly from the standpoint of the dairymen. Hundreds of reports show that the dairymen are more united than ever, realizing that they must now win the fight against the big Ferden and Sheffield Farms milk combine or go out of the dairy business. Less milk is being received today, despite reports to the contrary. Consumers realize this because they know they are not getting the milk. Consumers also know that much of the milk purchased from the dealers in the combine is not of good quality.

"I. Elkin Nathans, a high-salaried employe of the Conference milk combine, says the dealers are fighting for the consumers. His line of reasoning is difficult to follow when all the facts are known. Milk middlemen claim credit for reducing the farmers' price so low that if accepted thousands of farmers must make immediate arrangements to reduce their dairy herds and go in other lines of farming.

"But with all the dealer's generosity his own margin is not reduced at all, and this margin is nearly twice that made by milk dealers in other cities. Despite dealers' misleading statements, farmers' prices for milk in New York for 1918 were below the average throughout the United States."

A. F. Spooner, owner of Lowland Farms, at Richville, St. Lawrence County, which is one of the largest milk-producing counties in New York State, writes THE NEW YORK TIMES concerning the milk situation in his section. He says:

"The New York Milk Conference Board makes the statement that the farmers are destroying a large part of New York's milk supply. This statement, so far as Northern New York is concerned, is absolutely false. Cream, butter, and cheese are worth too much money for any one in his right mind to destroy the milk that can so readily be converted into these products.

"It also makes the statement that it is also true that when the farmers' product is sold for him as fresh milk and cream, it produces a far greater return in money than he can get in any other form.' This statement is also false. The writer has been in the dairy business for the last thirty years, and up to the time the Dairymen's League began to do business the independent butter and cheese factories were ahead of the market milk prices. Since the advent of the league there has been very little difference.

"The writer has been a patron of the Horton factory at Richville for the last twenty-seven years. For twenty-five years we had much better prices than the milk stations. The Horton Ice Cream Company has owned the plant for the last twelve years, and for the last two years we have accepted league prices, as that seemed the easiest way.

"The Borden Company and another large milk company have operated plants at Gouverneur for several years, while at the same time three small cheese factories, all within easy haulling distance of Gouverneur, continued to hold their patrons and operate their plants and on the whole paid their patrons better than the shipping stations. Twelve miles below here, at Rensselaer Falls, is a good shipping station owned by one of the New York companies. The farmers were dissatisfied, and about two years ago they clubbed together and signed up for a term of years with a cheese and butter man to build and operate an independent plant.

"For the last ten years the tendency in this section has been to gradually drop the old-fashioned factories and patronize the shipping stations and other large concerns purchasing milk at station prices, taking it for granted that the prices on the average would warrant their making the change. The tendency now is the other way. Last week the farmers at Gouverneur with two good milk plants already in town, met and signed up $30,000 with which to build or purchase one of the existing plants, the proposition being to equip said plant to manufacture butter and cheese; also to ship milk should anyone care to purchase.

"The Carthage branch has raised $10,000 toward a milk plant, and the farmers at Theresa are planning to do the same. This shows that the farmers in this section intend to gradually drop the milk shipping business unless things look different at the New York end than they have in the past."

BURST MAIN FLOODS BROADWAY SUBWAY

WATER UP TO PLATFORMS

Thirty-Six Inch Pipe Gives Way in Tunnel Sixty Feet Below the Street Level.

The bursting of a thirty-six inch water main at Broadway and Fourteenth Street at 3 o'clock yesterday morning flooded the Broadway subway of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, causing the complete suspension of traffic from Times Square to Canal Street. At midnight last night officials of the B. R. T. said they were making every effort to resume traffic this morning, but were handicapped by the slowness with which the water was sinking. Every available pump had been put into use, they said.

As soon as Police Headquarters learned of the accident, the Department of Water Supply was notified. Chief Engineer William W. Brush arrived fifteen minutes later and gave orders to have the water shut off from the main. Before this was accomplished at 4:30 o'clock, the subway from Twenty-eighth Street to Spring Street was flooded. The water reached its highest level at Twenty-third Street, where it was flush with the platforms. At Fourteenth Street the water covered the third rail.

Shortly after the water from the main began pouring into the subway a southbound train left the Twenty-third Street Station. It was compelled to stop halfway to the Fourteenth Street Station because of the rush of the water. Many of the passengers became alarmed when they saw the flooded tracks and demanded that the guards open the doors. This they did, warning the patrons that they left the train at their own risk. The passengers, six of whom were women, left the train, and in single file walked back to Twenty-third Street.

The rise of the water necessitated the shutting off of the current from the third rail and all traffic between Times Square and Rector Street was suspended. Traffic to Coney Island and outlying stations by way of the Seabeach and West End lines was also suspended for several hours. Later West End and Seabeach trains were run to Chamber Street, where connections could be made for points uptown.

Chief Engineer Brush said that the break had occurred in Shaft No. 2 which extends about 100 feet east and west under Fourteenth Street at a depth of sixty feet. He said the breaking of the main would not affect the water supply of lower Manhattan, as there were duplicate supply lines.

The B. R. T. placed signs at its stations notifying passengers of the suspension of traffic. At Times Square extra guards were on hand to direct passengers to the Interborough and other downtown lines.

Come See the Essex

Its First Showing—A Light Weight Quality Car

Next Thursday—$1395

Motorists will have their first sight of the Essex next Thursday, January 16th.

It is the car which motor papers have mentioned so frequently during the past year as a new solution of automobile transportation.

Automobiles have been developed along two widely different lines. One has been toward a cheap, light car. Economy and low first cost have been its chief advantages.

The other has been toward luxury, comfort and endurance. It has meant high first cost and heavy maintenance expense.

The Essex combines the advantages of these two types. It is moderately priced, and economical in operation. It has no useless weight. Its performance, comfort and finish, to the minutest detail, is comparable to that which you could get only in high priced cars.

Be One of the First to Ride in It

We begin public demonstrations of the Essex on Thursday. Hundreds of other dealers in all parts of the country are making their first showing of the Essex on that day.

If you will come in on Thursday, or better still, telephone that you will be on hand, we will arrange to demonstrate the Essex to you so that you can be one of the first in this community to ride in this new car.

The Essex is to do its own advertising.

Whatever you hear of it in the future will be whatever people choose to say about it.

No descriptions are to be advertised until hundreds of thousands of motorists have said what they think of the Essex.

It is to be sold on the merits of its performance and not by what we or the makers may claim for it.

That is the way the Essex was introduced to us.

We were invited to the factory. A lot of conjecture had been advanced about the Essex, but the makers would give us no particulars.

Had we not known the Essex builders as well as we do, through years of dealing with them, we might have been less confident of a car about which so little information was vouchsafed.

All they said was that it would meet the demand for a light weight, moderate priced, high quality automobile of unusual performance, luxury and stability.

But coming from them that meant more than volumes of claims.

The pleasure of our surprise, even with the knowledge we had of how temperate the Essex people are in what they say of their product, was so complete, we want you to receive the same kind of surprise.

If our own experience and that of hundreds of the most successful of automobile dealers in the country is a criterion, you will be both surprised and enthusiastic about the Essex.

May we expect you to ride with us Thursday?
